Training Horses

Pressure, Release Means Please, Thank You

ROCKSPRING (Centre Co.) — The system builds upon itself.

Brian Egan, horse program assistant, Penn State explained the method used to train horses at the university during 2002 Ag Progress Days.

"The system is based on pressure-and-release," he said. Physical and spatial pressure can be used to guide the horses, according to Egan.

The first lesson is to teach a horse to lead, which Egan demonstrated in the Horse Arena at Ag Progress Days last August.

Egan used a 2-year-old Quarter horse for his demonstration. When a horse is accustomed to the halter, he said, the handler should try

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — It's no secret that Lancaster County farms and agribusinesses are a major part of the local economy.

But the "increasing tension of coexistence" with neighbors calls for a change in tactics, according to Tom Baldrige, president of the Lancaster Chamber of Commerce and Industry.

"Agriculture is both significant and essential," Baldrige said at an ag issues forum at Landis Valley Museum here Thursday. "Yet for all its importance, it is not the most significant aspect of our local economy. The fact is, we are a manufacturing-driven county."

The manufacturing sector provides one of every three jobs and 40 percent of the wages, and

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — Of all the diseases for a dairy veterinarian to treat, one stands out as particularly insidious.

That distinction goes to bovine viral diarrhea, or BVD, according to Charles Gardner, DVM for Agway.

The disease, Gardner told more than 80 producers and dairy industry representatives, is "more common than you think," he said. It can strike all bovines, not just dairy animals.

Gardner told those who attended the Lancaster County Family Dairy Day on Monday that if they want to purchase dairy animals, consider BVD and "understand how it works."

Gardner was one of several speakers at the annual Dairy Day

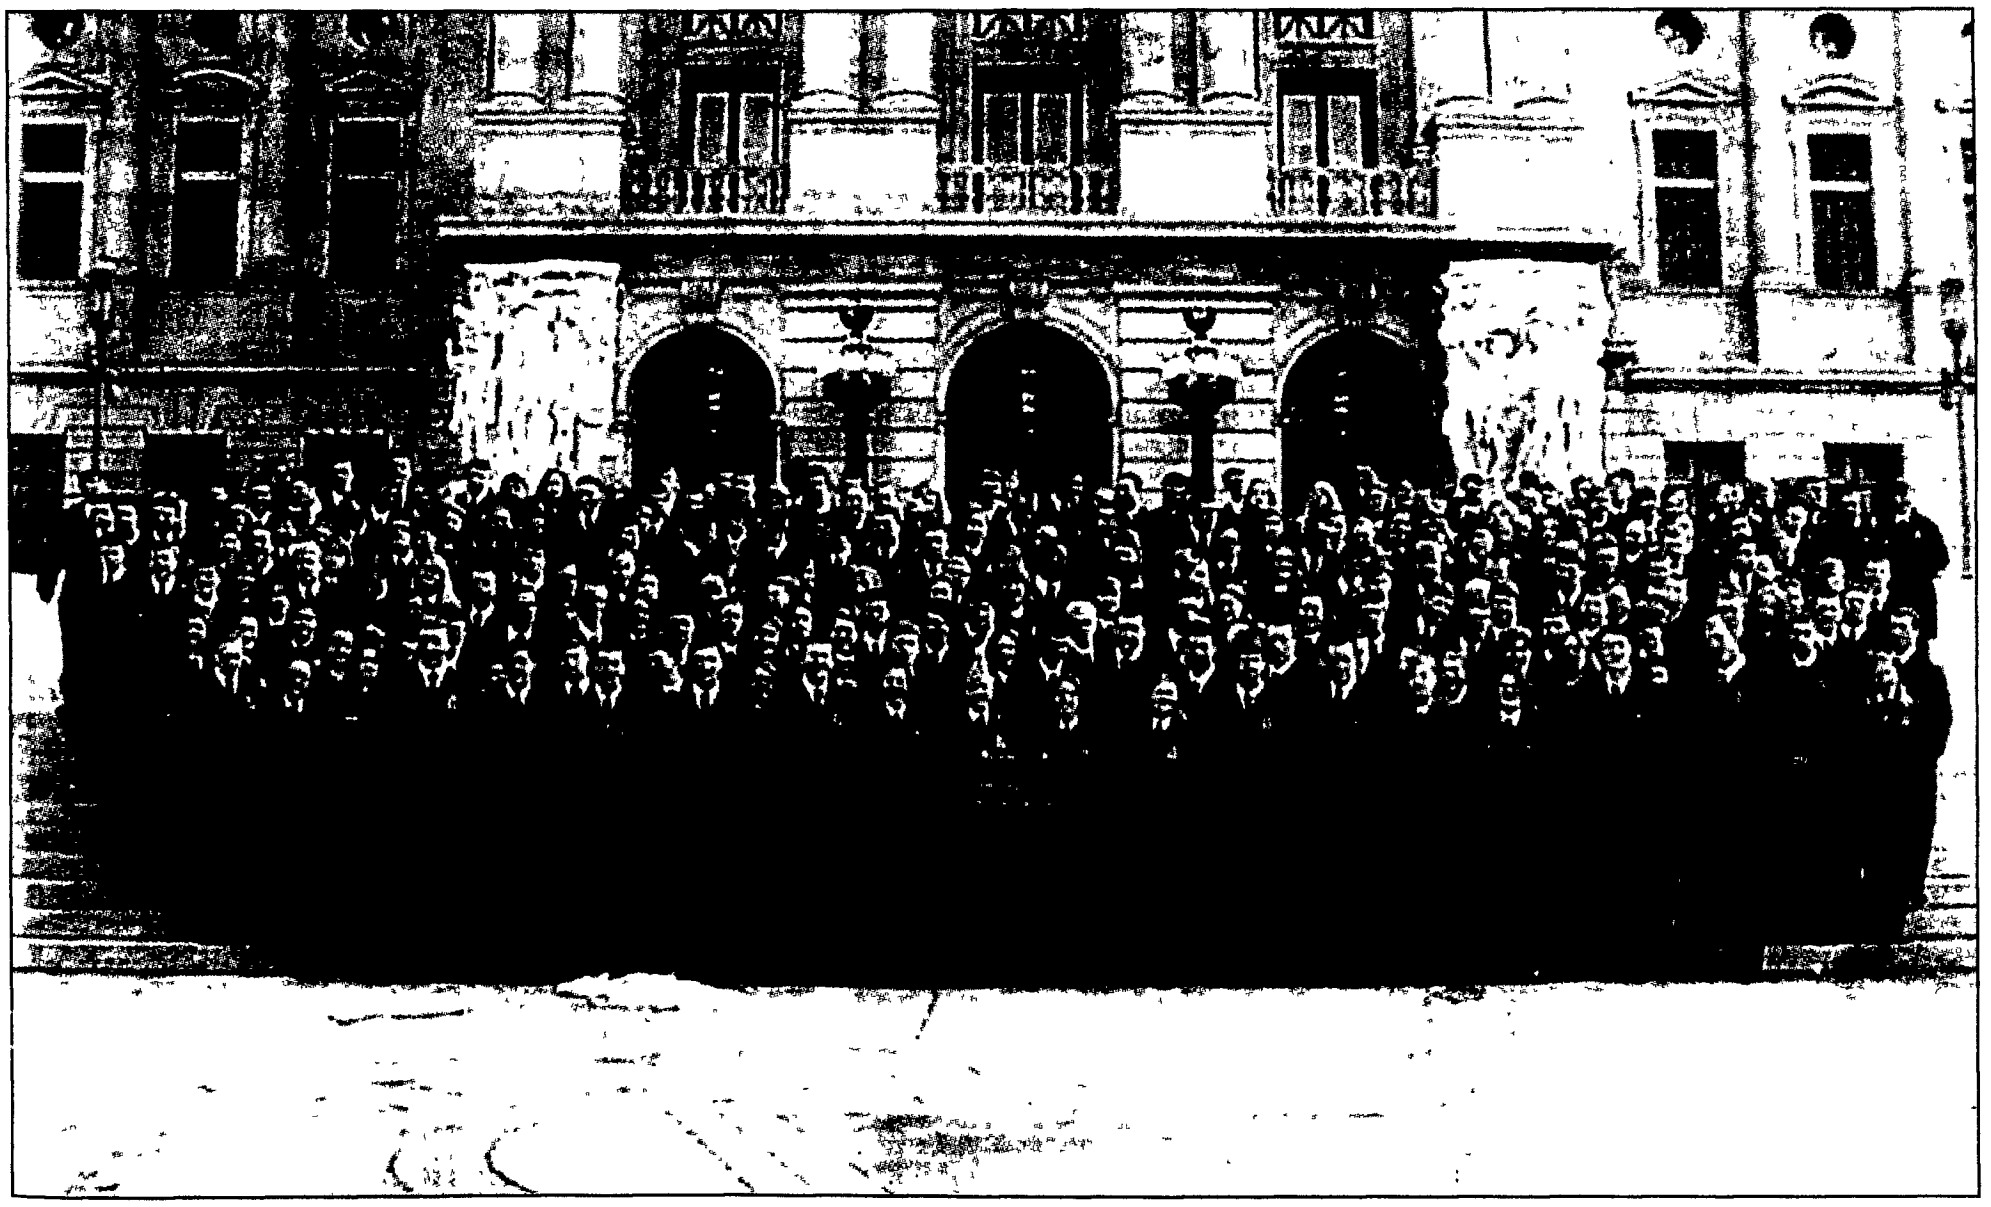
Hundreds Of FFA'ers At 2003 State Legislative Leadership Conference



HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — More than 320 Pennsylvania FFA members and advisers assembled on the steps of the state capitol last Sunday during the 16th Annual FFA State Legislative Leadership Conference (SLLC). This year the state officers and second-year scholars were responsible for putting together a new version of SLLC, complete with a House of Representatives and a Senate. About 220 members were assigned to the "House of Representatives" and approximately 65 members were selected for the "Senate." The House and Senate members then proceeded to discuss and amend a total of six actual Pennsylvania Legislature bills. See story page A36.

Compared to Thursday's lower market, slaughter steers sold a full 1 00 higher for both the Monday and Tuesday run Bidding was moderately active, but any action would be considered active when compared to Thursday's trade The quality of the stock was about average, with very few high Choice and Prime steers, especially on Tuesday There was a fairly good supply on hand, as over 235 head of steers sold on Monday, with 180 head on Tuesday's books Pressure is still evident in the finished market as April live cattle futures at the Merc closed down 145 points at 72 77 on Tuesday. Furthermore, the summer contracts are sitting around 66 00-70.00, which is very bearish The Western feedyards are shaping up to take another hit after last week's 77 00 market, as a few early week sales have been reported from 74 50-76 00 If that isn't enough to make you think the market might be heading lower as we look ahead to spring and summer, maybe lower boxed beef values will convince you, however, only time will tell Slaughter Holstein steers sold steady to firm in relatively active trading, with not enough slaughter heifers on offer to test the market.

Slaughter cows sold fully 1.00-3.00 lower when compared to Thursday's active market Slaughter bull sold with a lower undertone as well on the light run The supply included 43 percent steers, 7 percent heifers, 45 percent cows, 1 percent bulls, with the balance feeder cattle

Compared to Tuesday, slaughter steers sold mostly a full 1.00 lower. Bidding fluctuated for the entirety of the mixed run, as buyers tried to get uniform loads put together The high Choice and Prime supply was nil to void, as the majority of the run was made up Select and Choice stock. The buzz around the barn most of the day revolved around the lower Board this summer; with the summer contracts trading from around 67.00-69.00. Therefore, many of the local producers that are hitting the graded feeder cattle sales held in the surrounding states are looking for lighter cattle to put in their barns that will finish late this year, or early next year. Most producers are not willing to roll the dice and put 8 weights on feed that will finish this summer in the expected bearish market But one cannot always bank on the Board, as the Western direct feedyards recorded what most would consider a victory as they moved the bulk of their cattle from 76.00-77.00 this week after the April live cattle contract at the Merc moved up 1 10 on Thursday to close at 74 25. Once again local cattle feeders are back to punching numbers and figuring breakevens, instead of sitting back and watching their steers average 1000.00-1200 00 per head. Holstein steers sold weak to 1 00 lower, even though the supply was very nice and included a couple good consignments of high Choice and Prime cattle Slaughter heifers sold steady to weak when compared to the light early week runs Slaughter cows sold weak to mostly a full 1.00 lower, with even more pressure noted on select sales at times The cow market was expected to be lower as the carcass cutout value was over 2 00 lower coming into Thursday's sale. Slaughter bulls sold near steady when compared to the light early week supply. The reported supply included 35 percent steers (478 head), 6 percent heifers (80 head), 42 percent cows (570 head), 6 percent bulls (87 head), with the balance feeder cattle

Report Supplied By USDA

Receipts 277 Last Week 256 Year Ago. 489.

Compared to last week's light run, slaughter pigs sold with a higher undertone on continued light receipts. Buyer attendance was good, with demand firm for the 20-50 lb supply; with other weights not well tested. Near 100 percent of the run went to the kill floor. All pigs were weighed and graded on arrival and sold by the hundred weights.

Daily National Grain Market Summary

St. Joseph, MO

March 12, 2002

Report Supplied By USDA

Wheat bids continued lower for the third day, pressured by technical selling on the Boards. Export sales have been light this week, also adding weakness to bids. Warmer temperatures and moisture are in this week's forecast for winter wheat areas. Corn bids showed light strength from overnight export interest and trade expectations for good weekly numbers. Wet weather and warmer temperatures are forecast for the Corn Belt areas over the next several days, limiting gains. Soybean bids were corrected after the sharp rally on Tuesday. A small export sale overnight was noted. Wheat 3 to 8 cents lower. Corn 1 to 5 cents higher. Sorghum 1 cent higher Soybeans 3 to 6 cents lower.

Corn Belt Feedstuff

St. Joseph, Mo.

Report Supplied By USDA

CORN BELT FEEDSTUFF. Feedstuff prices were steady to weak except for Distiller's Dried Grains which showed some strength due to supply tightness. Kansas and Nebraska producers are sold out for the most part, a limited price of 115.00-120 00 has been quoted out of Kansas. Much of the distiller grains are being sold wet, locally as producers choose not to dry their product Soybean meal prices were slightly lower for the week along with most of the feed ingredients Last week's cold snap kept demand steady but buyers are looking forward to the warm up forecast over the next several days

The Old Farmer's Almanac This Week With Almanac

VERNAL EQUINOX, MARCH 20

THE "KING," THEN SPRING . . .

After you've finished celebrating St. Patrick's Day on March 17, it's time to listen to a little Nat 'King' Cole (born March 17, 1919). With the Full Worm Moon on March 18, those early worm castings are luring the first robins our way. On March 20, welcome springtime before your morning coffee break—the vernal equinox arrives at 8:00 P.M. EST. If you haven't got your seeds ordered, time's a-wasting! The swallows are returning to San Juan Capistrano.

Plan the whole year in the spring. –Chinese proverb

TIP OF THE WEEK

SPRING ROLLS

6 scallions, chopped
1 red bell pepper, seeded and chopped
2 cups sliced mushrooms
1 cup bean sprouts
2 tablespoons extra-virgin olive oil
1 tablespoon soy sauce
1/8 teaspoon ground ginger phyllo pastry (about 12 sheets) melted butter, to brush on

Sauté vegetables in olive oil until cooked. Add soy sauce and ginger and let cool. Preheat oven to 400°F. Fold a sheet of phyllo in half lengthwise, add some of the vegetables, and roll up like an eggroll, turning ½ inch of the edges inward as you roll. Brush with butter and place on a baking sheet. Repeat to use all ingredients. Bake for about 15 minutes, turn over, and bake for about 15 minutes longer. Serve hot.

Makes about 12 rolls

The Old Farmer's Weather Proverbs

St. Joseph's Day (Mar. 19) clear, so follows a fertile year.

Heat with Corn!

A BETTER ALTERNATIVE

The corn burning furnace has many advantages over wood and coal heat. The large storage bin holds up to 14 bushels of fuel, which is automatically fed into the combustion chamber as needed. There's no need to load the furnace several times a day. The use of corn also eliminates the bark mess, insects, splinters, and handling problems connected with the use of wood fuel, and the dust and dirt from coal. UL Approved.

Vote 'Yes' For Vegetables

David Miller
Chairman, Pennsylvania Vegetable
Marketing And Research Program

During the last two weeks of March, Pennsylvania vegetable growers will have the opportunity to vote on the future of the Pennsylvania Vegetable Marketing and Research Program (PVMRP). The PVMRP is the statewide marketing order for all growers who grow one or more acres of vegetables for sale (or 1,000 square foot of greenhouse vegetables for sale).

The Pennsylvania Vegetable Growers Association (PVGA), the independent association of commercial vegetable, potato and small fruit growers in the state, strongly urges growers to vote "Yes" in this review referendum. The Agricultural Commodities Marketing Act, under which the PVMRP is established, requires a review referendum every five years to determine if growers wish the Program to continue. The PVMRP was established in 1988 on a petition to the secretary of agriculture from PVGA. It has been re-approved by growers in review referendums in 1993 and 1998.

Since its beginning in 1988, the PVMRP has compiled an impressive list of accomplishments. The PVMRP has helped fund more than 150 vegetable research projects with more than $290,000. (PVGA has helped fund those same projects with an additional $240,000.) Those research projects have covered a broad range of problems facing Pennsylvania vegetable growers, including tomato and snap bean disease control; sweet corn insect control; tomato fertility; development

To Learn To Manage Conflict

With urban neighbors moving next to farms all across Pennsylvania, learning to deal with potential conflicts that can result is an important management skill for farmers. Penn State Cooperative Extension Service will host an all-day public conflict resolution workshop April 1 in Lancaster.

The program, "Public Conflict: Turning Lemons into Lemonade, A Hands-On Workshop for Community Leaders," is aimed at farmers, public officials, community leaders, and others who are interested in learning how to use conflict resolution techniques. It will be presented by Tim Collins, community and economic development extension agent from Adams County.

Growing areas such as Lancaster County face potential conflicts because of issues such as economic development and changes in agriculture and land use. The program is designed to help participants understand conflict and use it productively.

The workshop will cover a wide variety of topics, including the benefits of conflict, conflict styles and strategies, the difference between positions and interests, reframing issues to broaden stakeholders' involvement and bridge their interests, speaking for oneself, various approaches to problem solving, and evaluating options and reaching agreement.

A program fee will cover refreshments, lunch, and printed materials. The workshop will be conducted from 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. at the Lancaster County Penn State Cooperative Extension office, 1383 Arcadia Road, Lancaster. Attendees are expected from Lancaster, Lebanon, and York counties.

For more information about the conflict resolution program, contact Pat Simpson at the Adams County Cooperative Extension office in Gettysburg, toll-free (888) 472-0261.

To Welcome Our New Associate Director Of Penn State Cooperative Extension

Daney G. Jackson, associate professor and personnel leader for Ohio State University Extension, has been named associate director of Penn State Cooperative Extension, effective immediately.

"During his 17 years in extension, Daney has demonstrated outstanding leadership and a talent for building effective coalitions," said Theodore Alter, Penn State associate vice president for outreach and director of cooperative extension. "His success in shaping the human resource functions of a large state extension system, combined with his experience in regional extension administration and in conducting educational programs in the field, makes him uniquely qualified to help lead our organization during this time of economic uncertainty."

Jackson will provide leadership for the day-to-day operations of Penn State Cooperative Extension and will be a key member of the College of Agricultural Sciences administrative team. He will assist the director of cooperative extension in facilitating collaboration across the College of Agricultural Sciences and with other colleges and outreach units of the university.

Jackson began his extension career in 1985 with Mississippi State University, serving as a 4-H youth agent in Hancock County, Mississippi. From 1987 to 1991, he was an agriculture and natural resources extension agent in Lauderdale County, Mississippi.

After a year as a graduate associate at Ohio State University Extension's Ohio Center for Action on Coalition Development, Jackson returned to Mississippi Cooperative Extension, serving Lauderdale and Kemper counties as an area extension agent for forestry and horticulture from 1992 to 1994.

Jackson joined Ohio State University Extension as director of the 16-county south district in 1995. After being named statewide personnel leader in 2000, he directed the organization's human resources functions, including needs assessment, job analysis, job design, performance management, recruitment, hiring, compensation and benefits.

Jackson is a member of several professional organizations, including the national extension honorary society Epsilon Sigma Phi, the Society for Human Resource Management, the National Association of County Agricultural Agents, and the National Association of Extension 4-H Agents, which recognized him with its 1993 Achievement in Service Award.

Jackson received dual bachelor's degrees (forestry, banking, and finance) and a master's degree (extension education) from Mississippi State University in 1984 and 1990, respectively. He earned his doctorate in agricultural education from The Ohio State University in 1994.

THE BIBLE SPEAKS

BY LAWRENCE W. ALTHOUSE

DO YOU NOT CARE?

Background Scripture:
Mark 4:35 through 5:20.
Devotional Reading:
John 5:2-17.

Jesus and his disciples were crossing from Capernaum to the eastern shore of the Sea of Galilee. On the way, a great wind storm arose and, finding Jesus asleep in the stern, his disciples waken him with these reproachful words: "Teacher, do you not care if we perish?" (4:38). Years later, when Mark was writing his gospel, one might expect him to tone down these words (as Matthew and Luke do).

The words sound impertinent.

None of us are likely to have ever said anything like this to Jesus, but some of us have certainly thought along these lines when we have been confronted by something dangerous and frightening. In one way or another — perhaps by the bedside of a dying loved one, or at the office when we have been told we're being "let go," or when a natural disaster is staring us in the face — we have asked: "Lord, don't you care?"

We should not be so surprised by this reproach from Jesus' disciples.

It is what Jesus said to the disciples after he stilled the storm that trouble us: "Why are you afraid? Have you no faith?" This "faith" is trust in God and relying on his help. Didn't they realize that he would save them from the storm?

The answer, I think, is both yes and no. They must have looked to him for rescue or they would not have reproached him. It indicates that they thought he could help them, but that he had not.

Fear Vs. Faith

Many of us are fearful about many things because we don't really trust in God to help us. Fear paralyzes us and is the antithesis of faith.

If we trust God, we should fear nothing, trusting that the power and grace of God are more powerful than any danger or threat. Fear means that we believe in our obstacles more than we believe in God.

Civil War General John B. McClellan was a popular commander of whom, from President Lincoln on down to the buck private, people expected great things. But he had a fatal flaw: he could not bring himself to employ his armies effectively because of his persistent irrational belief that the enemy he faced was many times stronger than his own forces — even when, in fact, they were often half his strength. Many of us fail to live up to our potential because we magnify our obstacles and minimize our resources.

Still, I must ask: what, then, was it that the disciples of Jesus should have known? Should they have known that God would not permit them to perish on the Sea of Galilee?

Should they have known that God would not permit any of them to end up on crosses? Even if Jesus was in the same boat in a terrible storm, and even if he was the Messiah and the Son of God, should they have believed that none of them would be swept overboard?

What Guarantee?

The Pilgrim's Progress is a prayer that I often use in the evening: "Visit, O Lord, this dwelling, and drive from it all the snares of the enemy; let thy holy angels dwell in it to preserve us in peace, and may thy blessing be upon us evermore; through Jesus Christ, our Lord. Amen."

I use it as a prayer for God's presence and protection during the night. But when I pray it, do I have a guarantee that no burglar will break in or that my house won't catch on fire? If I get on an airplane, train, or ship, and pray for a safe trip, am I guaranteed against all dangers? Well, no, there's no guarantee. But does having faith mean that I should expect a "guarantee"?

No? But then, why do I pray it? (And why do you?)

I've wrestled with these questions for years and I have come to the conclusion that, for me, the guarantee I have as a follower of Jesus Christ is not that God will save me from every potential disaster, but that he will be with me in every one. Sometimes that will mean I will come through unscathed. Sometimes it means I may be hurt in some way. And sometime I will perish and, if that happens, God will be with me then as in all the other times.

Does God not care? Yes, he does care in every trial and trouble and the assurance he gives us is that he will be there with us. And, if God is with us, what other guarantee do we need?

The Rodale Institute's mission is to increase consciousness of the natural connection between healthy soil, food, and people's health. Chemical industrial agriculture that has grown explosively since World War II is fraught with acute and long-term dangers to the soil, food, and people. This type of agriculture is dependent on off-farm toxic chemicals in the form of herbicides, fungicides, insecticides, and yes, chemical fertilizers. These products were originally developed to allow for the production of explosives — the Bosch-Haber Process from World War I, and to exterminate people via chemical warfare — organophosphate insecticides during World War II. The redirection of these products after the major World conflicts does not mean they are safe for us or for our food system.

A recent study in Seattle has shown that more than 10 times the concentration of organophosphate insecticide is found in chil-

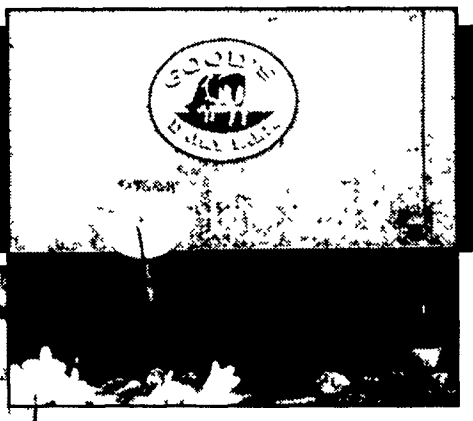
"WAFFLE SLAT" Syri-Con Corporation

"The biggest benefit is the labor savings."



"In my previous barn, I scraped two times a day; and I was tired of it, not to mention the danger to the cows if a cable snapped. I thought I would not be able to justify the additional cost until my builder suggested a design change which brought the cost down relatively close to the original design.

The biggest benefit to me is the labor savings. Two people can handle all the chores for our herd. I save money not only on labor but also on repairs.

The cows' hooves are healthier, and they show heat better because they are not afraid of slipping. During the five years with slats, I have not lost a single heifer from slipping. The cows stay much cleaner, even with my misting system for cooling them. The water has a place to escape."
- Raymond Good
Good's Dairy Farm

"My only regret is that I wish I had made the pit under the barn deeper."

East Fluid Milk And Cream Review

Madison, Wis.
March 12, 2003
Report Supplied by USDA

Spot prices of class II cream, dollars per lb butterfat FOB producing plants Northeast: 1 3594-1.4464 Delivered Equivalent Atlanta 1 3594-1 4681 mostly 1 3920-1.4138

PRICES OF CONDENSED SKIM, dollars per lb wet solids, FOB producing plants Northeast Class II, includes monthly formula prices. 9000- 9800, Class III - spot prices - 7200-.8400

SPOT SHIPMENTS OF GRADE A MILK FLORIDA: This Week In 0, Out 0, Last Week In 0, Out 52; Last Year In 0, Out 30. SOUTHEAST STATES This week In 0, Out 0, last week In 0, Out 0, last year: In 0, Out 0.

Milk production trends in the Eastern part of the country are reported to have basically plateaued this week Reports of production increases were not as prevalent during the week, with some handlers even indicating slight decreases in receipts Weather patterns in the Northeast were typical for this time of the year versus the adverse conditions of past weeks impacting everything from farm pickups, manufacturing schedules, and distribution logistics Milk output in Florida and other Gulf Coastal states is seasonally strong, although holding basically steady Florida's production was in check with demand, thus no milk was reported leaving or entering the state. Class I sales and demand are quite strong in Florida as the spring break tourist season begins. With the Easter holiday late in April this year, Florida bottlers anticipate that the spring break period will be stretching out over the next 4 - 6 weeks Many bottlers are welcoming this longer, more manageable period, versus the tighter period of past years Condensed skim markets are holding basically steady price wise with demand not overly aggressive. Cream markets are firm with prices and pricing differentials increasing Many buyers that were accustomed to lower prices for readily available volumes of cream in recent weeks are finding that these offerings are no longer available Cream supplies have tightened and prices are higher Demand for cream from Class II buyers is sharply higher as they prepare for the upcoming Easter/Passover holiday. Cream cheese production is increasing seasonally Ice cream production is also heavier, building stocks for future needs. Churning schedules remains seasonally active, although surplus cream offerings to local and out of area butter operations have tightened.

What has the Vegetable Marketing & Research Program done for Pennsylvania Growers?

FUNDED RESEARCH

In the last 15 years the Program has helped fund over 150 research projects with over $290,000. Those research projects have:

-developed a disease forecasting system for tomato early and late blight, enabling growers to more effectively time their fungicide sprays;
- established a statewide trapping network to monitor the emergence of sweet corn insect pest populations;
- enabled growers to fine-tune their tomato fertility programs;
- supported the development of disease resistant tomatoes, snap beans and pumpkins;
- evaluated vegetable cultivars for adaptation to Pennsylvania conditions;
- trialed various disease control methods for snap beans;
- developed biocontrol strategies for greenhouse insect pests;
- evaluated plasticulture and high-tunnel production systems for vegetables;
- tested no-till pumpkin production methods;
- evaluated atrazine alternatives for sweet corn;

and much more besides.

PRODUCED POINT-OF-PURCHASE MATERIALS

The Program has produced thousands and thousands of colorful posters, banners, binwrap, decals, price cards, price paddles, stickers, brochures, recipes cards, hats, shirts and aprons for use by growers who retail their produce. These point-of-purchase materials, some of which won design awards, are all designed to identify in a sharp, professional manner local produce as being proudly grown by Pennsylvania growers. Most of these materials have been distributed to growers free of charge through an annual credit system.

ADVERTISED PENNSYLVANIA VEGETABLES

For the last seven years, the Program has posted billboards across the state promoting Pennsylvania vegetables during the season. The first year the Program worked on its own with a matching grant from the Department of Agriculture. Since then the Program and Department have worked together to post billboards.

PUT PENNSYLVANIA VEGETABLES IN THE NEWS

Since 1990, the Program has kept Pennsylvania newspapers supplied with press releases about Pennsylvania vegetables throughout the growing season. As a result, hundreds of articles have been printed in newspapers read by 24 million readers. The Program also sponsors the "Simply Delicious" Vegetable Quick Bread Contest at many local fairs and the State Farm Show.

BROUGHT BUYERS AND GROWERS TOGETHER

The Program has developed directories of growers to distribute to wholesale buyers and lists of buyers for growers as well as publishing grading and packaging guidelines. The Program has also represented the industry at the Produce Marketing Association Expo in 2001 and 2002 and various other events.

Weekly Dairy Market Outlook

Ken Bailey
Professor of Agricultural Economics, Dairy Marketing and Policy
Penn State

March 7, 2003
CHEESE BOUNCES BACK

- Blocks now higher than barrels.
- Butter rises above support.
- When will things get better?

While not dramatic, things did improve slightly this week. Block cheese prices rose from weird and shockingly low levels last week to $1.08 per pound at the Chicago Mercantile Exchange. While it is still below the support price of $1.1314 per pound, it is better than 99 cents per pound! And butter surprisingly rose more than three cents above support levels to $1.0875 per pound.

The rise in cheese prices likely had little to do with the dairy price support program. There has been some cheese going into the government program, but not much. USDA reported that more cheese will likely move into the Commodity Credit Corporation in the weeks ahead. But clearly the cheese industry prefers to market their product to real customers, not to the government.

All eyes will be on the March 17 milk production report. The agonizingly low milk prices have made milk production unprofitable for all dairy farmers. An easing of dairy replacement prices is an early warning that there is less demand for them. If the March milk report shows cow numbers leveling off, or even falling a bit, look for cash market prices to improve.

My interpretation is that we are now at the bottom of the market (of course, I said that last fall!). As they say on Wall Street, you have to hit bottom before things get better. It is unlikely that these $9 Class III prices will continue beyond the next month or two. Of course the low cheese prices last week will be reflected in the March milk check. Farmgate milk prices should begin to improve by May. In fact, we could see some improvement in cheese and butter prices by April or early May, but only if we see cow numbers declining.

For those considering forward pricing milk for the summer and fall months, my suggestion is to hold off. Locking in milk futures right now could result in frustratingly low milk checks later this year. It is generally a bad strategy to lock in the bottom of the market. This depressed cash market has lowered expectations for futures prices later in the year. That could change in a month or two if the cash market improves. So, hold off on committing large amounts of your milk at these prices.

Average Farm Feed Costs for Handy Reference

To help farmers across the state to have handy reference of commodity input costs in their feeding operations for DHIA record sheets or to develop livestock feed cost data, here's last week's average costs of various ingredients as compiled from regional reports across the state of Pennsylvania.

Remember, these are averages, so you will need to adjust your figures up or down according to your location and the quality of your crop.

CHAINLESS BALE FEEDER BF5000

- Dual Prong Hydraulic Bale Lift This patented system makes loading fast, easy and ensures the bale is always in constant control
- Bale Lift Position Gauge Indicates lift height for spearing different sized bales in the centre
- Varying Speed Rotors The top rotor turns 3 times faster, fluffing the hay as the bale unravels
- Hydraulic Bale Platform The platform safely keeps the bale tight against the rotors without the use of chains - avoiding mechanical breakdowns

Take the hassle out of feeding large round bales with the Agway Chainless Bale Feeder. Its chainless operation provides safer, more consistent operation, keeping the bale in control. The BF5000 also reduces spoilage caused by bales sitting outside in bulky inefficient stationary units. The Agway Chainless Bale Feeder works as well in the barn as it does in the field, allowing you more freedom to decide when and where to feed your livestock. Talk to your local authorized Agway dealer for purchase details.

If you're planning to get bigger...

And some cash.

Before you turn over the first shovelful of dirt for an expansion project, I hope you'll put pencil to paper to figure out how it's going to benefit your farm business. And when you get to the financing part of your planning process, I hope you'll give me a call. At ENB, we've been helping farmers grow their businesses for the past 120 years.

THE FOALING MARE
Fredrick R. Hofsaess Ph.D.
Professor of Animal Science

Spring is coming, and for many mares, so are their foals.

While the normal gestational length of the mare is 340 days, considerable variation in pregnancy length exists and a variation from 320 to 360 days is certainly possible.

Therefore, the expectant mare should be watched during the last month of pregnancy to avoid "unexpected" arrivals.

Mares may exhibit a variety of signs as foaling approaches; with some mares, especially maidens, showing few signs of approaching parturition.

Signs may include softening and flaccid musculature around the tailhead, relaxation and edema of the vulva, some filling of the udder, and "dropping" of the abdomen.

"Waxing" of the teats may occur a few days to a few hours before foaling. Some mares may leak colostrum for hours or days before foaling.

Mares may be sampled for the calcium ion concentration in the udder, as it is known that the calcium level of the "colostrum" rises 72 to 24 hours before foaling.

As the mare approaches foaling, most will show some degree of discomfort exhibited by walking in circles, looking at their flanks, mild sweating, and rubbing/switching their tail.

Many may defecate and urinate frequently and some will eat a considerable amount of straw while leaving available hay untouched. During this time, the foaling is being positioned and the placental membranes are dilating the cervix.

Stage II or "active" labor may last from a few minutes to 20 minutes and includes uterine and abdominal contractions to rupture the first water bag and expulsion of the foal.

It is important to leave the mare alone during this time as long as progress is being made with each series of contractions. Commonly there will be four to eight strong contractions followed by a "rest" period of several minutes.

Normally the feet will be presented first (soles down) followed by the nose/head. If the mare remains in labor for more than 15-20 minutes with no progress being made, a malposition may exist and the mare should be gotten up and walked while competent assistance is obtained.

Malposition may exist if only one foot is present, if the head does not follow the two feet, more than two feet are presented, feet are upside down, or the nose appears without the front feet.

As the foal emerges, the inner sac or amnion usually breaks. If the amnion does not break, free the nose/head from the membrane so the foal is able to breathe.

Allow the mare and foal to lie quietly and undisturbed. The foal will usually begin to move about in 10-20 minutes and break the umbilical cord.

Most foals will be in dorsal recumbancy (sitting on their chest) within 30 minutes. The naval stump should be dipped in a container of tincture of iodine.

Be careful to avoid contacting the skin with iodine as it may scald the hide of a newborn foal. Redip the cord again at least twice in the next 24 hours. Most foals will develop a nurse reflex within 30-45 minutes after birth.

The last stage of labor is the expulsion of the afterbirth or placental membranes. This should take only a few hours and the retention of the placental membranes beyond four hours post foaling is considered "retained" and a veterinarian should be contacted.

Many mares object to the membranes contacting their hocks and it is advisable to tie the placenta up with baling twine. Do not cut the placenta off at the vulva as the weight assists in expulsion of the membranes. Conversely, do not pull on these membranes as damage to the uterus may occur.

Addison Co-op Recognizes Quality Producers

FREEMAN, N.Y. — Addison Milk Producers Cooperative conducted their annual meeting recently in Freeman, N.Y. Patronage checks had been mailed in December to co-op members.

Robert Button, treasurer, reported that the co-op is in sound financial position.

President Robert Nichols reported on the activities of the co-op this past year. The co-op is concerned about the attrition of dairy farmers as the result of current market conditions. Nichols reminded members that Addison Co-op could use additional quality producers for their market. He also noted that United Ag Services pays a sign up bonus for any member that signs up a new member.

James Patsos, CEO of United Ag Services, discussed the milk situation and consolidation going on in the industry. He predicted that milk prices will improve in 2003. With the increased milk price, co-op premiums, and MILC payments the average price for 2003 should be about $14 per hundredweight, according to Patsos.

Patsos presented awards to the top quality producers in Addison Co-op this past year. Top Quality Producers are:

- Walk-Moor Farms, Cohocton, N.Y.
- Double D Dairy, Cameron Mills, N.Y.
- Ervin Miller, Jr., Woodhull, N.Y.
- James and Patricia Welch, Troupsburg, N.Y.
- Kim Shaklee and Janice Brown, Canaseraga, N.Y.
- Don and Kathy Bossard, Canaseraga, N.Y.

If anyone has an interest in improving this milk market, contact Bob Nichols, Addison, N.Y. (607) 359-2199.

Ag's Future, Ethanol Plans On Slate At Issues Forum

generates the most economic spin-off in Lancaster County, Baldrige said. Another 35 percent of employment comes from the growing service industry.

About one in five jobs in the county are agriculture-related, with a total of 7,000 workers in production ag alone.

Beside employment opportunities, Lancaster County agriculture makes a number of other contributions to the economic and general welfare of the area, Baldrige pointed out.

Farms and rural culture are a primary draw for the $1.3 billion annual tourist business here. The farm economy also makes a major contribution to the tax base while using only 7 cents of the tax dollar.

Another benefit, coming more into the spotlight in recent drought years, is the crucial role that open farmland plays in groundwater recharge.

"The list goes on and on," Baldrige said. "There's no denying the significance of agriculture."

However, because "Lancaster County has among the most expensive ag land in the U.S." and this farmland "is confined to small fields and nearby neighbors," the community needs to take a different approach in promoting a viable agriculture, according to Baldrige.

"For agriculture to continue its success, we need to change the message," he said.

This effort includes more than preserving farms, according to Baldrige.

"I believe in farmland preservation," he said. "It's important, but we shouldn't let that be the only message."

Baldrige recommended five examples of action to help keep farms and agribusinesses thriving in the county:

- Work to "preserve the farmer" by educating farmers and public officials on crucial topics.
- Ensure industrial-zoned land is protected as well as farmland in order for ag-processing facilities and other agribusinesses to exist.
- Bolster an "ag-friendly" community through means such as promoting on-farm businesses and easing burdensome regulations.
- Develop a Lancaster brand of farm products.
- Create a vision for the future of the Lancaster County ag economy.

"Our local economy is very interrelated," Baldrige said. "We need each sector to prosper.

"Agriculture is an important industry in Pennsylvania, and Lancaster is a fertile place. Let's not let it go at that."

The forum also included an update on the prospects of an ethanol-producing plant in southcentral Pennsylvania.

Scott Welsh, project manager for Penn Mar Ethanol, LLC, said that the group is working on final site selection and full capitalization for an ethanol facility. A group of investors has committed to the project. Site selection is focused on the area of Cumber-

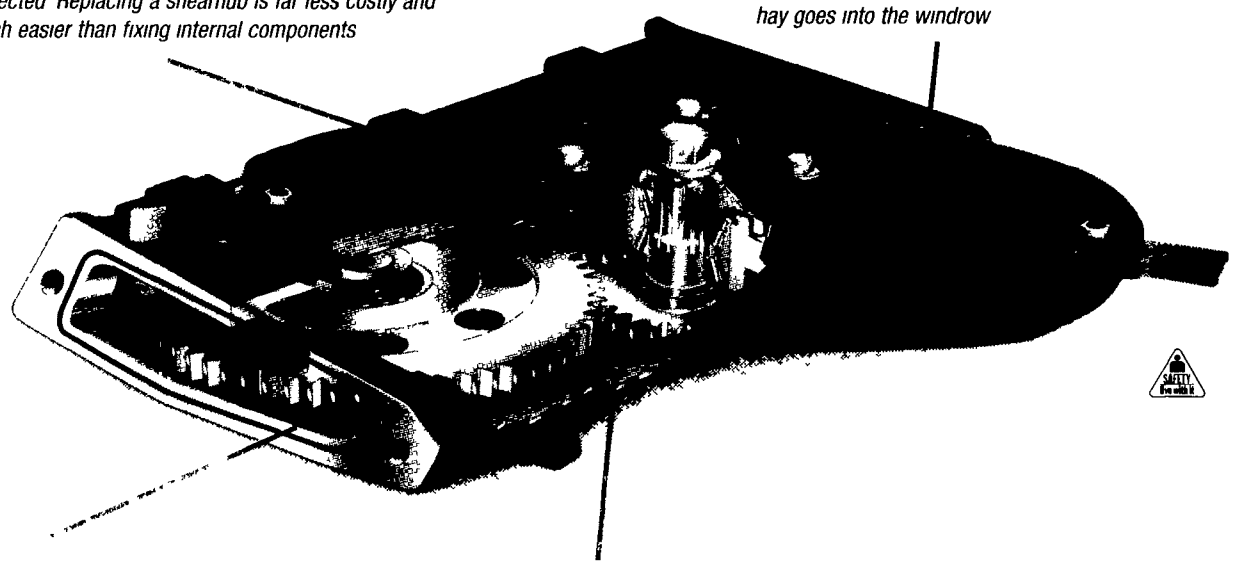
What makes John Deere Rotary MoCos better?

Shear Genius.

A smarter way to protect.
Each disk is protected with a patented shearhub for the best disk protection in the industry Should you hit an obstruction, the splines shear, leaving the inner gears protected Replacing a shearhub is far less costly and much easier than fixing internal components

A smarter way to harvest hay.
Disks rotate toward the center of the cutting platform to lift the crop and cut cleaner. And since knives usually rotate toward each other, streaking is dramatically reduced or eliminated. All of the hay goes into the windrow



A smarter design.
Each diagonal-cut module can slide in and out without the cutterbar being removed The common oil reservoir, with up to 11 quart capacity, delivers plenty of cooling lubrication Plus, the vented cutterbar design means less heat build-up, a big reliability advantage

Brawn to go with the brains.
The low-profile design cuts closer and at a flatter angle And the cutterbar is made from high-strength nodular iron, making it stronger and more impact-resistant than grey iron This cutterbar has the strength to resist anything the field throws at it

Smart choices in conditioning.
Get the conditioning you want with exclusive urethane roll or thorough impeller conditioning (steel rolls also available on 946 and 956 models) Your hay quality – and productivity – will soar

John Deere has been making rotary MoCos for more than 20 years. The 6 Series MoCos are built with the same legendary quality and reliability found in all John Deere machines. So stop by your local John Deere dealership today and learn more about the smarter way to cut and condition hay. The genius in you will appreciate it.

land, Dauphin, York, and Lancaster counties, Welsh said.

Welsh was first hired as an ag economic development specialist by the York County Economic Development Corporation. Penn Mar Ethanol was recently formed to move ahead with the ethanol project.

In the spring of 2002, an outside consultant performed a feasibility study for the project. The study indicated positive economic prospects for a plant in south-central Pennsylvania that would produce 40 million gallons of ethanol per year from corn. The plant would also produce 131,000 tons per year of feed-grade dried distiller grains, as well as 97,000 tons of carbon dioxide, potentially marketable to the region's carbonated beverage industry.

Tom Baldrige urges agribusiness leaders to help "preserve the farmer."

Welsh noted that such a facility could add about $24.7 million a year to the local economy and boost the value of corn.

One of the factors that favor strong future markets for ethanol is the likely banning of MTBE — shown to be a human health hazard— as a gasoline additive. Ethanol is a safe and environmentally sound replacement for MTBE in gasoline.

California banned MTBE within the past two years, and the move toward banning it is expected to come to the Northeast, according to Welsh, who said the additive is "headed down the same path as asbestos."

Another advantage of ethanol is its potential ability to help wean the U.S. off of foreign oil dependency.

Most of the country's 70 ethanol plants are located in the Midwest. None to date have been built in East Coast states. However, Welsh said that Pennsylvania's proximity to major markets for ethanol and its co-products, as well as the positive corn basis here, help make the prospects feasible.

About 40 people from the agribusiness community attended the ag issues forum Thursday morning.

While Pennsylvania's corn production varies widely from year to year, "demand is always met," Welsh said.

Railway infrastructure for bringing in midwestern corn, plus the fact that ⅓ of the corn used in ethanol production comes out as distiller grain that could be used to feed Pennsylvania livestock, would help offset the fact that Pennsylvania is a corn deficit state, Welsh pointed out.

The Ag Issues Forum was organized by Mike Brubaker of TeamAg, along with Brent Landis, ag coordinator at the Lancaster Chamber of Commerce and Industry, and Bob Zook, vice president of the Ephrata National Bank.

About 40 people from the agribusiness community attended, including four members of the Hans Herr FFA Chapter.

at the Farm and Home Center. The theme was "Strategies For Success."

What makes BVD so complicated and difficult to treat is that a perfectly healthy cow can carry an infected fetus. A newborn calf, infected with BVD, can wreak havoc on the rest of the herd in a variety of ways.

BVD can show up in one of two ways on a dairy farm. It can exhibit itself as a transient infection (TI), which infects animals for 2-3 days with diarrhea, of which cows recover and then become immune. It can also show up in the more dangerous form, as persistently or permanently infected (PI), contracted by the fetus beyond the first third term of pregnancy, and spread after birth readily throughout the herd.

BVD is found in 1 percent of about 5,000 calves, according to the vet.

With the immune system in the developing fetus, the virus is perceived as "normal." When born, the calf may be small, a "poor doer," said Gardner, or die at an early age. If the calf survives to breeding age, it can shed millions of the viruses.

Producers have to test calves brought to the farm. That's why it is important to test prior to purchase (at the cost of a $5 viral isolation lab fee).

If a herd becomes infected, symptoms may not show until 1.5-2 years. That's why producers must test calves with a skin biopsy from the first day of life.

Gardner provides a simple caution: if you ever plan to bring animals to the farm, test them for BVD.

Gardner provided information about control of Johne's Disease (simple tests for the problem in addition to keeping young stock away from old), and cautioned that if producers "buy a lot of cows, you will bring in Johne's," he said.

The calving pen can be the battlefield for preventing spread of Johne's on the farm.

Another disease that producers should be aware of is contagious mastitis. That includes mycoplasma and staph aureus.

Helpful strategies for producers include:

- Culture the bulk tank for mastitis and BVD
- Look closely at somatic cell count numbers
- Test regularly for Johne's
- Test animals for BVD
- Provide sound ventilation and excellent nutrient programs, in addition to good cow comfort.

Biosecurity, noted Gardner, is the buzzword, but the risks are real. A closed herd can be beneficial, but it is most at risk if you bring in disease, he said.

If you are going to bring in purchased animals, Gardner has these tips:

- Test before you buy
- Observe biosecurity with trucking
- Segregate new animals if

Oklahoma Feeder Cattle Weekly

Oklahoma City, OK
Report Supplied By USDA

OKLAHOMA NATIONAL STOCKYARDS, Weekly Cattle Summary — Compared to last week: Feeder steers and heifers steady to 1.00 lower. Demand fairly good for feeders. Stocker steers and steer calves firm to 2.00 higher. Stocker heifers and heifer calves steady. Demand again very good for grass cattle. In contrast to the past two years, trucks are readily available in the middle of a busy March wheat run. Though auction receipts across the state are large less contract cattle are being picked up. Another large run expected next week. Quality average. Feeder cattle in medium to mostly fleshy conditions; stockers and calves in thin to medium flesh. Total of 390 cows and bulls sold with 52 percent going to packers. Receipts this week 15,230; last week 10,819; last year 17,444. Supply consisted of 84% yearlings over 600 lbs; 13% calves; 3% cows and bulls. Heifers comprised 35% of feeder & calf supply.

Slaughter Cattle Weekly Review

Oklahoma City, Okla.
March 7, 2003
Report Supplied By USDA

NATIONAL SLAUGHTER CATTLE SUMMARY — Week Ending Mat. 7, 2003 — Slaughter cattle traded 2.00-3.00 lower than last week. Packer demand good with main focus on immediate needs. Sellers astutely took lower money in an effort to encourage maximum slaughter rates through strengthened packer margins. Both sides of the trade acutely aware of increasingly lower slaughter cattle CME for April, June, and August. The situation requires packers to stay close bought and sellers to move cattle aggressively. Cattle futures trading has been quiet throughout the week as Feb-Mar placements into feedlots become the dominate question. Some feel there are less cattle on wheat than normal while others believe the opposite. Numbers at auctions and in direct sales of feeders off wheat are being closely examined. The only sure thing is that wheat cattle are concentrated in different areas than last year. Boxed beef prices closed Friday a.m. at 125.50 down just 66 cents for the week. Sales of slaughter cattle on a national basis for negotiated cash trades totaled 189,400 through 10:00 a.m. Friday. Last week's full count was 157,500.

STEERS AND HEIFERS: MIDWEST DIRECT MARKETS: Live Basis: 35-80 percent Choice, 900-1400 lbs 76.00-77.50, wtd avg 77.05. Dressed Basis: 35-80 percent Choice, 550-950 lbs 121.00-124.00, wtd avg 122.83. HIGH PLAINS: Live Basis: 35-65 percent Choice, 900-1400 lbs 76.00-78.00, wtd avg 76.98.

SLAUGHTER COWS AND BULLS (Average Yielding): Slaughter cows and bulls steady to 1.00 higher. USDA's Cutter cow carcass cut-out value closed Thursday at 94.11 up 1.88 from last Friday and up 6.67 from two weeks ago.

COWS: Breakers 75-80% lean 1000-1600 lb: Colorado 41.50-45.50; Oklahoma 41.00-44.50; Alabama 36.00-39.00. Boners 80-85% lean 900-1500 lb: Colorado 41.50-45.00; Oklahoma 43.00-44.50; Alabama 38.00-41.00. Lean 85-90% 850-1400 lb: Colorado 40.00-43.50; Oklahoma 39.00-42.00; Alabama 35.00-38.00.

National Feeder Cattle Weekly Review

St. Joseph, Mo.
Friday, March 7, 2003
Report Supplied By USDA

NATIONAI FFEDER & STOCKFR SUMMARY for week ending Mar. 7 — Receipts 403,700, last week 263,900 Direct 78,600; last week 55,900 Video/Internet 32,400, last week 4,600. Auctions 292,700; last week 203,400 This week's reported auction volume included 57 percent over 600 lbs and 44 percent heifers

Compared to last week, a two way trend was seen on feeder cattle Weights under 700 lbs sold mostly steady to 2 00 higher and over 700 lbs steady to 2 00 lower This reflected the lower finished cattle trade and the anticipation of spring green grass and pastures Slaughter cattle prices 2 00-3 00 lower this week, 77.00 on the hoof and 123.00 in the beef Boxed beef cutouts lower at 128.00-129.00. Feedlots turned loose of a fairly liberal volume this week as they want to remain current with the nearby futures at a 2 50 discount to live bids and August futures down near 67.00. Supply side, numbers, looking favorable for cattle producers but demand side has many questionables. Consumers concerned about war, terrorist activity, the economy, high home heating fuels, a long hard winter, 2.00 a gallon gasoline, relatively high unemployment and a plummeting stock market However, the cattle industry does not look as suppressed if consumer beef demand holds constant Experts and The Board correctly pinpointed the window in this year's February market Handicappers don't always pick the fastest horse but cattle traders and brokers put up money to establish guidelines and sometimes hedging opportunities. Consumer beef demand and Mother Nature (the weather) hold the answers Adverse weather conditions curtail feeder cattle receipts the past couple of weeks but busy big seasonal runs, including movements off wheat, should increase numbers next week

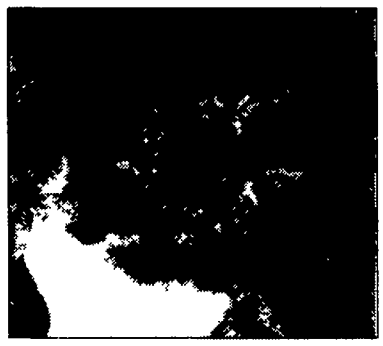
Cimarron SR
ALFALFA

Top Forage Quality
Cimarron SR produces larger leaves than other alfalfa varieties (See photo right) And it holds its leaves better in the field and in the baling process The result is a leafier hay with higher protein and TDN Break open a bale of Cimarron hay, and you can see the difference



High Yields - Long Stand Life
Cimatron SR is producing excellent yields in the Penn State trials And unlike other alfalfa varieties Cimarron SR was bred on the East Coast, so it stands up well under the difficulties of Eastern conditions You can count on Cimarron SR for long stand life and top productivity

Sclerotinia Resistance
Sclerotinia crown rot is a significant problem for alfalfa growers on the East Coast Cimarron SR provides the protection against sclerotinia that growers need

Weevil Tolerance
Cimarron SR's unique alfalfa weevil tolerance reduces weevil damage by 50%. In a heavy infestation spraying can be cut in half In lighter infestations spraying can be avoided altogether

AVOID MYCOPLASMA LIKE THE PLAGUE

Dr. Arlen Mills
Extension Veterinarian
Capitol Region

I received a call recently from a producer concerning a mastitis problem. He had been having an unusually high number of clinical mastitis cases that he thought were typical of coliform infections. Udders apparently fine at one milking would be hard with no milk at the next. These cases did not seem to respond to any of the drug treatments which had been tried.

On arriving at the farm to have a look, the producer also mentioned that he was having some calf problems. I walked out to the hutches to have a look at the calves first. Several calves had pneumonia, but I saw one calf with enlarged joints and one droopy ear. I then asked the producer if he had heard of Mycoplasma. He hadn't, but cultures confirmed that the mastitis in the cows and the calf problems were all caused by Mycoplasma infections.

Mycoplasma organisms are unique agents because they are bacteria-like but lack the cell wall that other bacteria have. Mycoplasma infections are nothing new to producers who raise poultry or hogs, but the strains that are being isolated from cattle are not coming from the other animal species.

Many producers bring the organism onto the farm by purchasing infected animals. This may be either from lactating animals that are shedding the infection in the milk or can also be brought onto the farm in the respiratory form as pneumonia.

The udder form is spread most effectively in the milking process from cow to cow. It can affect single or multiple quarters but often spreads quickly to any uninfected quarters.

There are several species of Mycoplasma, and some are much more likely to spread than others. Mycoplasma bovis seems to be a particularly nasty type, causing pneumonia, ear infections, reproductive infections, and mastitis.

Routine mastitis cultures will not detect the Mycoplasma organism. The lab must be told to culture specifically for Mycoplasma and, if it is cultured, be certain that the species is identified. The organism is slow growing, so reports will take several days longer than routine mastitis cultures.

There is no effective treatment for mastitis caused by Mycoplasma infections. Because it is so contagious, all infected cows need to be found and isolated. Once Mycoplasma has been confirmed to be on a farm, all fresh cows should be cultured before being put in the milking string. All clinical mastitis cases should also be cultured to be sure that no mycoplasma infected cows are missed.

Dr. Arlen Mills

If only a few cows are infected, culling these cows is the safest strategy. Some cows may recover enough to again produce milk, but most of these cows continue to shed the organism. These cows can be a source of infection to start another outbreak. Herds with large numbers of infected cows will try to isolate these cows into a Mycoplasma group that is milked last. but this requires stringent routines to control the infections.

Infected calves which show infected joints or ear infections are also not responsive to treatment. Infections diagnosed early before they develop these signs may respond to an appropriate antibiotic. This may be tetracycline, Micotil, Nuflor, or Baytril. But there is still the chance that these heifers may continue to shed the disease and develop mastitis when they eventually freshen. They are a risk.

I used to think that Mycoplasma was a "California" disease. But no longer. I hear of new cases every week. Most new infections can be traced to the arrival of heifers or cows from off the farm. If you are anticipating buying lactating animals, require the herd of origin to be "bulk tank culture negative" for mycoplasma. Isolate all incoming stock from the herd for a minimum of three weeks and, if lactating, culture individual cows before they are allowed to enter the milking string.

This disease can be devastating, and the best way to combat it is to avoid it. Be on your guard.

Spring Means Produce Auctions Open For Business

EPHRATA (Lancaster Co.) — Now that spring is just around the corner, produce auctions will soon be under way.

Several auctions have announced their starting dates and times. Here is an alphabetical list of auctions and starting information.

• Buffalo Valley, Richfield. Begins April 15 at 10 a.m. Sales will include mostly flowers, including Easter, in addition to bedding plants.

• Cumberland Valley, Shippensburg. Sales begin March 25 with flowers at 9 a.m.

• Kirkwood Produce Auction, Kirkwood. Begins April 24, with sales on Thursday at 9 a.m. to start and then every Tuesday and Thursday until the season progresses.

• Kutztown Produce Auction, Kutztown. Begins March 25 and will be every Tuesday and Thursday at 9 a.m. A Saturday auction is at 9 a.m. Special nursery auctions will be March 27, April 10, April 24, May 8, May 22, and June 5.

• Lebanon Valley Produce Auction, Reistville. Begins with a shrub sale April 5 at 9:30 a.m. A special opening day is April 15 at 9:30 a.m. with flowers and early produce.

• Leola Produce, Leola. Sale begins March 20, 10 a.m.

• Shippensburg Produce Auction, Shippensburg. The auction has been open prior to Valentine's Day and offers produce all year. The auction is open Tuesdays at 9 a.m. until April, when days will expand as season progresses.

• Snyder's Produce Auction, Port Trevorton. Begins March 21 at 10:30 a.m. with produce.

• Weaverland Produce Auction, New Holland. Begins March 20 at 9 a.m., with mostly flowers. March 27 will begin nursery stock sales with sales every Thursday.

Organic Dairy Meetings Set In New York State

ITHACA, N.Y. — A series of three meetings on Organic Dairy Production will take place across New York State, sponsored by the Northeast Organic Farming Association of New York (NOFA-NY) and Cornell Cooperative Extension.

The meetings are scheduled on March 20 at the Civil Defense Center in Bath, NY; April 8 at the Cooperative Extension Office in Watertown; and April 9 in Richfield Springs at the Tally Ho Restaurant.

Lisa McCrory, Dairy Technical Assistance Coordinator for NOFA-VT and staff person for the Northeast Organic Dairy Producers Alliance (NODPA), will be featured in the morning program of each event.

Ms. McCrory has extensive experience with organic dairy producers throughout the Northeast, and edits the NODPA Newsletter, which is sent to all organic dairy farmers in Maine, Vermont, New Jersey, Massachusetts, Connecticut, Pennsylvania, and New York. She will provide valuable information on how the new Federal Organic Standards affect production practices and regional organic dairy market prospects.

In 1992 there was one certified organic dairy farm in New York State; now there are over 100. Dairy farmers are encouraged to visit NODPA's website at www.nodpa.com. NODPA's mission is 'To enable organic family dairy farms, situated across an extensive area, to have informed discussion about matters critical to the well being of the organic dairy industry as a whole.'

In the afternoon, panels of New York or Pennsylvania organic dairy farmers will discuss issues of particular local and audience interest with plenty of time for questions and answers. Finally, researchers and educators from Cornell and NOFA-NY will solicit input on future research needs and educational efforts.

These meetings are primarily oriented toward existing organic dairy producers, but will cover much of interest to those seriously considering transition to organic practices. There will be a follow-up organic dairy meeting in each location next fall, which will focus on mastitis and herd health management on organic dairy farms.

An attendance fee will be charged. Lunch will be provided. To pre-register and for more information and directions, please call (607) 664-2300 for the Bath meeting, (315) 788-8450 for the Watertown meeting, or (607) 334-5841 for the Richfield Springs meeting.

These meetings are funded in part by Cornell's Funding for Research in Organic Agriculture Program. For more information about many other small farm topics, visit the Small Farms Program WebSite at www.smallfarms.cornell.edu.

USDA Reminds Producers Of March 17 Closing Date

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The USDA's Risk Management Agency (RMA) reminded farmers and ranchers interested in purchasing crop insurance that the closing date to participate and receive coverage is March 17.

"Last year's drought in various parts of the country is a vivid reminder why producers should use risk management tools such as crop insurance," said Agriculture Secretary Ann M. Veneman. "This year's closing date is fast approaching and, we encourage interested farmers and ranchers who haven't done so yet to take advantage of these important resources."

To mitigate concerns about drought coverage, RMA encourages producers to buy higher levels of crop insurance in 2003. "Many producers have better prevented planting coverage during drought than they realize," said RMA Administrator Ross J. Davidson Jr. "Crop insurance protection is a vital part of producers' risk management strategy."

Information regarding current coverage on prevented planting, agent locator assistance, as well as a list of the states and crops with a March 17 deadline is at http://www.rma.usda.gov/. Information is also available at local Farm Service Agency offices.

Lancaster Holstein To Tour Mifflin County

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — Lancaster Holstein Club plans a tour to Mifflin County on Tuesday, March 25.

The tour will leave the Lancaster Farm and Home Center, 1383 Arcadia Road, Lancaster, at 7 a.m. Cost is $20.

Tour members are encouraged to bring a lunch. Supper is scheduled at Stop 35 Restaurant.

Tour stops include Paul Neer, Lynn Neer, Mel Peachey, Vernon Yoder, Mike and Bill Ammon, and Kish-View.

For more information and to sign up before March 20, contact Lowell Brubaker at (717) 653-2612 or Joe Wivell, (717) 426-1501.

State House Committee To Attend Senate Public Hearing On Dairy Proposal

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Rep. Ray Bunt (R-Montgomery) announced members of the House Agriculture and Rural Affairs Committee will be attending a Senate hearing on March 19 in State College to receive testimony from parties affected by a proposal from the Pennsylvania Milk Marketing Board (PMMB) that would change the formula for distribution of premiums paid to dairy farmers.

"We appreciate the invitation from the Senate Agriculture and Rural Affairs Committee to participate in this hearing on a complicated and controversial proposal," Bunt said. "We must examine and research this proposal carefully before a decision is made."

The PMMB's proposal covers the "pooling" of the over-order premium paid to dairy farmers on drinking milk that is produced, processed, and sold in Pennsylvania. The hearing is being held to help the members of the House and Senate Committees, which are currently reviewing the regulation, better understand what the PMMB is proposing.

Since the premium's inception in 1998, roughly $280 million has been distributed to members of the dairy industry. Bunt said these numbers make it especially important that the committees take their time with their decisions.

"This is a complicated and controversial matter within the dairy industry. The stakes are high," Bunt said. "We must proceed carefully and work hand-in-hand with those who this will directly affect — the dairy farmers."

dren not following organic based diets compared to those who following the consumption of organically labeled foods in their diets. Dr. Elizabeth Guillette, cultural anthropologist from the University of Florida, Gainesville, and her collaborators show that children in Mexico exposed to pesticides are hampered in their ability to grow and develop. More than twice the toxic insecticide load was found in children than adults recently. Modern-day worldwide decline in human sperm counts is highly correlated with the rise of synthetic chemical use (Dr. Warren Porter, endocrinologist at University of Wisconsin, personal communication).

Since 1981, The Rodale Institute has been conducting a long-term Farming Systems Trial™ that has monitored the effects of three distinct cropping systems of corn and soybeans on yields, soil parameters, and environmental components. The USDA and more than 25 graduate degree studies have aided and verified our results. The experiment includes organic systems utilizing legumes or manure as the primary nitrogen source and a chemically based agricultural system.

Organic systems need not depend on off-farm pesticide nor chemical fertilizers. After collecting data for 22 years, we have seen no advantage to the chemically based system in yield overall.

However, in drought years this system functions at a distinct disadvantage, showing yields reduced by more than 25 percent in corn and soybeans when compared to the two organic systems. Organic systems use 37 percent less energy when compared to the energy input of the chemically based system.

The highest energy requirement in chemically based corn production is for nitrogen fertilizer production. In terms of economics, work conducted by the University of Maryland with our data shows that even when organically produced crops are sold at conventional prices, the organic systems out perform their conventional counterparts by returning more net income to the farmer. When you figure in the price premiums that organic products return, as much as 50 to 267 percent more than chemically based commodity prices, the organic systems look even better. These prices are based on the high demand for organic food for human consumption and livestock feed.

We have also shown that winter vetch legume and cover cropping can produce optimum amounts of nitrogen for nitrogen-hungry crops such as corn without chemical fertilizer dependence. Moreover, while chemically based systems sprout chemically resistant pests and deplete soils of their ability to manage water and maintain biological activity, the organic systems have shown increased organic matter quantity and quality, greater diversity of biological components, increased soil nitrogen over time, and greater stability under stress such as drought.

Consumers are driving a 20 percent per year increase in the production and marketing of organic agricultural products because they do not buy the argument of "safe" chemical levels. These levels are only "safe" for the chemical producers. We agree with the authors we are rebutting from the American Potash and Phosphate Institute, that the Earth has large reserves of nutrients to sustain agriculture and produce abundant safe food (Foraging Around, Feb. 22, p. E22). However, neither the synthetic chemical inputs nor the toxic processes and principles sustain and regenerate family farms and the communities. This is only done by following sound biological practices based on natural and regenerative principles. While chemicals do not produce abundant healthy food for consumers and farmers alike, organic agriculture does.

Penn State Grad In Leadership For American Shorthorn Association

OMAHA, Neb. — The American Shorthorn Association (ASA) has announced that Dr. Ronald P. Bolze, Jr. will come on board as the new executive secretary/treasurer of the ASA on May 1.

Bolze, raised on a dairy farm in south central Pennsylvania, comes to the ASA with experience and knowledge in the beef industry.

A graduate of Penn State, Bolze received a Bachelor of Science degree in Animal Science. While at Penn State, he participated on the livestock and meats judging teams and was very active within the college.

During his senior year, Bolze was recognized as the Outstanding Senior in the College of Agriculture.

After graduation, Bolze returned to his family farm near Lancaster and spent the next five years developing a commercial cow/calf operation and cattle feeding enterprise.

Bolze returned to the academic scene in 1981. In 1985, under the guidance of Dr. Larry Corah, he graduated from Kansas State University with a Ph.D. in Reproductive Physiology. His research dealt with factors that involve dystocia in beef heifers under various conditions.

Bolze has worked with numerous entities within the beef industry; gaining valuable knowledge in all facets of the industry.

He will be taking over as Dr. Roger E. Hunsley steps down after a 20-year career with the Shorthorn breed.

Bolze and his wife, Rebecca, currently live in Colby, Kan. with their six children.

The annual Lancaster Farming Animal Health and Housing Book is scheduled April 5. Focus will be on herd health and odor control, including silo management, and nutrient management planning for confinement houses.

OPINION

of disease-resistant varieties of tomatoes, snap beans, and pumpkins; cultivar evaluations; no-till pumpkin production techniques; atrazine alternatives for sweet corn; high tunnel and plasticulture techniques; and greenhouse biocontrol strategies to name a few.

Seven years ago, the PVMRP applied for a matching grant from the Department of Agriculture to promote Pennsylvania vegetables on billboards across the state. That effort inspired the department itself to undertake a produce promotion program that has developed into the "Simply Delicious" Promotion that has resulted in the state spending hundreds of thousands of dollars to promote vegetables (and fruits) on billboards (more than 350 last year), on point-of-purchase materials in supermarkets, and on radio and television (more than 2,000 television ads were aired last summer). The department has also used its influence to encourage supermarkets to purchase more local produce. While the PVMRP cannot claim credit for all that the state has done through the "Simply Delicious" program, the PVMRP is part of the foundation upon which the "Simply Delicious" promotion was built.

The board of growers responsible for guiding the PVMRP has adopted the "Simply Delicious" logo and theme for all of its promotional activities. The PVMRP has promoted Pennsylvania vegetables on billboards (more than 40 last year); with point-of-purchase materials (supplied to about 400 farm markets last year); by new releases throughout the summer (which have resulted in about 100 articles per year in newspapers across the state reaching, 24 million readers over the years); and with publications (directories for both growers and buyers). The program has worked with the Department and PVGA to represent the industry at the national Produce Marketing Association trade show as well as at various events in the state.

The PVMRP is a prime example of how growers working together can help build the state vegetable industry in ways that would not be possible without growers working together. The assessment monies collected by the program have been used to fund research that otherwise might not have been undertaken. And grower dollars invested in vegetable research are a proven way of leveraging additional research funds from government sources and elsewhere for projects of direct benefit to growers. University administrators recognize that the vegetable industry is willing and able to annually fund vegetable research. They in turn are more likely to support vegetable researchers with other resources they have available.

Through the PVMRP, growers are helping themselves collectively rather than waiting for a government handout. The net result, however, has been that for the last seven years, the PVMRP has been able to double, and in one case triple, grower assessment dollars for promotion through the Department of Agriculture's Matching Grant Program. None of those funds would be available to the vegetable industry if the PVMRP did not have grower assessment dollars to match the Department of Agriculture's grants. Instead, that money would go to other agricultural industries for promotion.

With the change in administration in Harrisburg, it even more crucial that vegetable growers send a signal to Secretary of Agriculture Dennis Wolff that vegetable promotion and the "Simply Delicious" promotion are important to growers. If growers are not willing to promote their own products through the PVMRP, the Department of Agriculture may well question the reasonableness of spending taxpayer dollars that are in tight supply to promote Pennsylvania "Simply Delicious" vegetables.

Clearly, now is not the time to walk away from the progress the PVMRP has accomplished in the past 15 years. Now is the time to continue that progress by voting "Yes" to continue the Pennsylvania Vegetable Marketing and Research Program. Vote "Yes" for vegetables.

F.M. Brown's Sons, Inc. Conducts Meetings

BIRDSBORO (Berks Co.) — F.M. Brown's Sons, Inc. recently concluded a series of three customer meetings with emphasis placed on dairy nutrition and management.

Mark Wagner, director of nutrition at Brown's discussed two areas of recent interest at Brown's.

The first was the value of sugars in dairy rations. Research has documented the positive effects of having 4.5 to 6 percent sugar in dairy rations. Ensiled feeds are very low in sugar, as are many of the by-products being sold as forage substitutes. When these low-sugar rations are fed, the ability of the high-producing cows to digest forages is impeded.

Wagner discussed problems associated with current net energy prediction equations. Most use only acid detergent fiber (ADF) to predict energy, but a more accurate system should also include starch, nonstarch carbohydrates, digestible fiber, fat, and protein content of the plant. Brown's forage analyses provide these important nutrients, but many forage reports do not even look at starch level, which is the most important indicator of net energy in corn silage. Wagner reviewed a new equation from the University of Wisconsin that incorporates all these values to better estimate corn silage's true net energy value for lactation.

As part of a "Closer Look" Program, Brown's gathered water samples from more than 75 customers' wells and, with the help of Agri-Analysis, had these samples analyzed for coliform bacteria, nitrate nitrogen, pH, and 10 major and trace minerals. Taking a closer look at water quality was one of the highlights of the meeting, and Dr. Dana Tomlinson of Zinpro Corporation shared his thoughts on why water quality in dairy herds is important.

He stressed that not all water is equal. He also stressed that next to air, water is the most important nutrient we provide for our cows.

Tomlinson cited research by Ensley from Iowa that showed watering space per cow, water trough cleaning, and distance between the feed bunk and water source were all correlated with higher milk production. He discussed maximum recommended levels for minerals and other compounds in water.

Nutritionally your water may be fine, but because of high content of sulfur, nitrates, manganese, and iron, cows may not want to drink their fill because they dislike the taste. Subsequently, cows do not milk as well as their genetic potential would indicate.

He stated that elements such as calcium, often detected at high amounts in water samples, have little impact on nutrition since the total calcium intake from water is still less then 10 percent of a cow's minimum daily requirements.

Carl Brown, sales manager of F.M. Brown's Sons, Inc., discussed the results of the Brown's Water Testing Survey of 2003. Seventy-five wells were tested, and 36 wells, or 48 percent had coliforms higher then 1 colony per 100 ml. Also 31 percent had nitrate nitrogen greater than 10 ppm, while 12 percent had pH below 6.5. All these levels will interfere with nutrient digestibility and metabolism. Most wells were high in calcium and magnesium, making the water fairly hard. Most wells also had concentrations of iron and manganese higher than recommended. This gives the water a metallic taste cows don't like, but has little impact in meeting or exceeding their nutrient demands for these minerals.

Several water-conditioning companies were interviewed for this presentation, and all stated that if water quality is a concern, treat coliforms first. Each farm has a unique set of problems that should be addressed individually. Brown then reviewed the various types of water treatment systems available, including water conditioners, UV lights, chlorine injectors, chlorine pill dispensers, electronic deposit control systems, and reverse osmosis systems. He reviewed the estimated prices and the advantages and disadvantages for each system.

Dr. Elliot Block, director of research at Church & Dwight, presented a talk on Megalac-R. The title, "The Effects of Feeding Fat To Dairy Cows On Reproduction: It's Not Just About Energy" neatly summarized his talk. He discussed why fat should no longer be considered just for its energy value. Fats are made up of fatty acids and each type of fatty acid has a different effect on the rumen. Saturated fatty acids are easy to feed, but are hard for cows to digest. These fats are usually solid at room temperature. Unsaturated fats (usually classified as oils) remain liquid at room temperature and have a high digestibility in the intestine. When oils are fed at high levels, they interfere with fiber digestion and cause severe milk fat and milk protein depression. To overcome these negative aspects of adding unsaturated fats to the rumen, Megalac was invented. Megalac helps keep unsaturated fats from interfering with fiber digestion in the rumen while allowing for excellent digestion of these fats in the intestine.

Dr. Steve Moreland, DVM, director of technical services for Braes Feed Ingredients, discussed the general concepts of using botanical compounds in feeds. BFI has been a leader in this area in the past 40 years, and has developed a product called Apex that is added to Brown's Calf Cox-Guard and Grow-N-Glow to get calves off to a fast healthy start. Apex contains a group of specific herbs that contain aromatic, antiseptic, and antioxidant properties. When fed to calves, it improves growth and increases feed intake.

Poultry The Priority At Recent Seminar In Lancaster

MICHELLE KUNJAPPU
Lancaster Farming Staff

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — Quality and growout issues were the topic of conversation at Lancaster County's recent Poultry Progress Day, conducted at the Lancaster Farm and Home Center.

The seminar drew 125 producers and industry representatives.

Susan Ranck and Bryan Woods, Farmer's Pride, discussed farm-to-processor quality assurance and quality control measures.

Hatcheries have an impact on bird quality if chicks react to their vaccination, which can be prevented if the vaccination is administerd properly.

Infections acquired in the hatchery, along with retained yolk sacs (caused if the hatchers are too warm) cause trim loss or condemnations, according to Woods.

Growers can have an impact on how the production line runs if they raise birds that are "flighty," which in the end causes unnecessary trim and carcass downgrades.

"You don't want to domesticate them, but we can see the difference of birds used to having people around," said Ranck.

Flighty birds tend to have poor skin quality from wounds received from the rest of the flock during a flight away from a person. "It's important that we keep the feathering up and the skin quality as good as we can," said Ranck.

They also address airsacculitis — internal infection of the bird through the respiratory tract. Stress on the farm means that the birds are more prone to bacterial infection, said Ranck. "This is probably one of the largest areas of frustration between growers and processors. We understand that it's not 100 percent avoidable."

"There is no such thing as a perfect broiler house. What we're looking for is to minimize the peaks and valleys," said Woods.

Poor litter conditions cause potential skin problem and increase bacterial load, they pointed out.

Feed withdrawal was also addressed.

"The ideal is to get the birds off feed when they're required to do so," according to Woods. If the chickens are engorged and ruptured in processing, the line is slowed for cleanup.

"This is the prime focus of government control," said Woods.

To summarize, "we want to try to establish a good line of communication between the plant and the growers," he said.

Dr. Bud Malone, University of Delaware Extension, addressed trees as vegetative filters for poultry farms.

The public "smells with their eyes" he said, pointing out that poultry producers can rely on the "out of sight, out of mind" adage.

In addition, "it's amazing, the ability of trees to capture dust," he said, noting that studies have shown that filtering exhaust air can reduce odors up to 65 percent.

As far as production benefits, trees lower both heating and cooling cost, reduce snow drift, and decrease airborne farm-to-farm or house-to-house disease transmission.

Penn State Poultry Scientists are looking for poultry meat producers (contractors) to volunteer for this tree project demo.

Producers can contact either Mike Hulet at (814) 863-8934 or Gregory Martin at (717) 394-6851.

More information about the program is available at www.rec.udel.edu/TopLevel/Publicat.htm.

Dr. Gregory Martin, Penn State capital region poultry agent, spoke about neighbor relations for poultry farmers.

Producers work in tight margins, care about animals, are trying to do the right thing, and grow quality products, he noted.

In addition, townships and legal bodies are concerned about upholding laws and welfare and use ordinances. "They do value ag" said Martin, since it is a business not needing the support of infrastructure yet helping economically and environmentally.

For the third player, neighbors, "family health and welfare come first," he said. "They feel they have paid for the right to live where they like."

However "for the most part, people understand what we're doing and they support it," he said.

"Think before you act," he said to the producers in the audience. "A little compassion goes a long way," he said, noting that if farmers have a plow and plow out a neighbor's driveway, "they'll think you're the best thing since sliced bread."

He encouraged them to "talk about your industry," "be positive," and "follow up" on contact with neighbors.

"If you stay positive, never get flustered, and give the facts, you will portray a positive attitude," said Martin.

"Think about your management practices. They're generally fairly inexpensive to do, they do take some diligence, but will pay off in the end."

Martin also offered the help of the fly-control SWAT team that works on issues of fly management, odor, and dust control.

The group is a joint team of members from Penn State University, PennAg Industries Poultry Council, and representatives from the industry. Producers, townships, and residents who would like to contact the team may do so by calling (717) 394-6851.

Ray Leiby, Wenger's Feed Mill, Inc., addressed feed bin management — "an important but sometimes overlooked area of management," he said.

Taking care of the feed bin maintains pellet quality and maintains structure quality.

In addition, managing a feed bin decreases risk of contaminants, insects, moisture, mold, toxins, and odors. It ensures the proper applications of medicines and keeps feeds of different nutrient value (starter versus grower) separate. Bin management means that there will be less of a buildup of old feed, which decreases storage capacity.

"Keep bins dry," he said, advising producers to repair bin leaks and make sure that bin lids have a proper seal.

"Rotate the feed in bins," said Leiby, and wherever possible, allow bins to stand empty and air out.

Remove caked, moldy buildup, and wash and air dry at least twice a year and document all cleaning.

Keep only one type of feed in a bin at a time, he said. In addition, replace worn tube augers, which leads to better pellet quality.

Patty Dunn, Penn State Veterinary Diagnostic Laboratory, University Park, updated the audience about California's outbreak of Exotic Newcastle Disease (END).

On outbreak of END means "dire disease ramifications, regulatory consequences, and eco-

Nebraska Cattlemen Help Defend Beef Checkoff

LINCOLN, Neb. — In defending the beef checkoff recently before the 8th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in St. Paul, Minn., an attorney for the Nebraska Cattlemen argued that the First Amendment does not come into play on the programs constitutionality.

The generic beef promotion by the Cattlemens Beef Board in this case represents government messages, and producers who object to it therefore have no First Amendment complaint, just as pacifists have no First Amendment complaint when the government urges people to consider a career in the military.

The Nebraska Cattlemen (NC) attorney and one from the U.S. Department of Justice, representing USDA on behalf of the Cattlemens Beef Board, made arguments appealing a June 2002 decision by U.S. District Court Judge Charles Kornmann, who ruled that the checkoff was "unconstitutional and unenforceable."

Since Judge Kornmanns decision, two other district courts in Montana and the District of Columbia have ruled that promotion programs such as the beef checkoff constitute government messages.

First, the purpose of the messages to maintain a healthy beef industry was established by Congress in the Beef Act and by the Secretary of Agriculture through regulation.

Second, the government message is communicated through the Beef Board, which was created by Congress and whose checkoff-paying beef producers are appointed by the Secretary of Agriculture.

And third, the Secretary of Agriculture exercises supervision over the activities of the Board to ensure that it communicates the governments message.

nomic impact," according to Dunn. The disease can infect other avian species — in fact, 236 kinds of birds.

The disease can survive for weeks in moisture. However common disinfectants, heat, dryness, and sunlight can inactivate END.

On Oct. 1, 2002, a game fowl flock in Los Angles was first reported to be END-positive, which spread by Dec. 19 to the first commercial flock.

California has more than 700 positive premises in six counties.

In January, backyard poultry in Nevada and Arizona were tested positive for END.

In response, besides depopulation, the USDA has plans for national surviellance. "It's not just a California problem, it's our problem, too," said Dunn.

Greg Kirkham, Westfield Group, discussed the "care, custody, and control" clause of insurance.

Paul Sauder, Sauder's Eggs, and Gene Petit, Wenger's Feed Mill, Inc., discussed animal care.

"As a company, we look at it (animal welfare) and say, 'it's a mindset.'" Being good stewards, said Sauder, "translates into what I call the vision of ethics as a company and as an industry. Customers are telling us today they want us to treat our chickens humanely... we have to be willing to say, 'how are we going to grow feed that will feel good?'

"It all boils down to what I call doing the right thing."

Petit described results from a cage density study conducted by Wenger's Feed Mill. The study focused on the impact that cage density has in a commercial facility.

Demands of fast food restaurants triggered the study, he said.

Workers measured production, mortality, water consumption, case weight, and "dirties," or eggs with debris on the shell.

Birds were divided into three groups, with the nine-bird group having 53.3 square inches, the seven-bird groups having 68.6 inches, and the six-bird groups having 80 square inches per bird.

One surprising find was that "There was no real difference" between mortality in the birds of the six- and seven-bird groups, but less mortality in the nine-bird groups.

However "there was a larger difference in production than we expected," as there was not only higher production but also almost one pound difference between the six- and nine-bird groups.

Dr. Eric Gingrich, Poultry Diagnostic Laboratory, University of Pennsylvania, New Bolton Center, provided a hen/pullet health update.

Swine School Features Small-Scale Systems

ITHACA, N.Y. —In response to growing interest from small farmers, the 2003 Cornell Swine School, set for March 20-21, will include one full day of educational programming specifically for small-scale producers and those thinking about getting started in small-scale pork production. This is the first time that organizers are offering a focus on small-scale systems since 1983, when the Swine School first began.

"There is a real need for this small farm initiative," said Tro Bui, extension associate with Cornell's Department of Animal Science. Bui regularly fields inquiries from people wanting to convert old dairy barns for production of swine, goats or sheep. "I get all kinds of basic questions, like 'where can we buy breeding stock? Where is the market? What should I feed?'"

The first day of the Cornell Swine School on Thursday, March 20 is for producers of any size, while the next day is targeted for smaller producers. Students in the small farm session will learn about basic swine health management, artificial insemination, managing baby pigs, feeds and feeding, group housing systems, marketing opportunities, and more.

The Cornell Swine School is conducted at the Livestock Pavilion and in Morrison Hall on the Cornell campus, with some sessions at the Cornell Swine Farm. The program includes both classroom and hands-on training, including practice with injections, tail clipping, castration, artificial insemination, and diagnosis of health problems by necropsy.

To register for the 2003 Cornell Swine School, call Tro Bui at (607) 592-1438. For information on a variety of small farm topics, visit Cornell's Small Farms Web Site at www.smallfarms.cornell.edu.

Transition Cow Workshops Set

HUNTINGDON (Huntingdon Co.) and BERLIN (Somerset Co.) —Penn State Extension is hosting a Transition Cow Workshop to help teach participants proper transition cow feeding, health management, and housing. The workshop will also look at the nutritional role of phosphorus in dairy rations.

The workshop will be a morning lecture section followed by a visit to a local farm.

Dr. Gabriella Varga and Dr. Bob Van Saun will speak on "Feeding the Transition Cow" and "Health Management Systems." Dr. Zhiguo Wu will address "Controlling Phosphorus in Dairy Rations," and John Tyson will speak on "Special Needs Housing".

The Transition Cow Workshop will be offered March 18 at the Huntingdon County Extension Office in Huntingdon from 9:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m., and March 20 at the Berlin Fire Hall in Berlin from 9:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m.

The cost of the workshop will be $15 per person to cover the cost of lunch and educational materials.

For more information about the Transition Cow Workshop, contact John Tyson at (717) 248-9618 or at jtyson@psu.edu" jtyson@psu.edu.

Grazier To Demonstrate Aeration Tillage

WERNERSVILLE (Berks Co.) — Forrest Stricker, dairy grazier from the Wernersville area, will host a field day at his farm Tuesday, March 25 from 10 a.m.-2 p.m.

The focus of the field day will be an aeration tiller first designed in New Zealand in 1983 and recently redesigned by Jim Martindale, soil scientist.

According to Stricker, the tine tiller can be used for a wide range of tillage jobs, from aerating pastures to heavier work preparing soil for seeding.

Stricker operates a semi-seasonal, certified organic dairy farm, milking about 100 cows during the peak season.

The field day is free of charge. Guests should bring their own lunch. Drinks will be provided.

For more information, call (610) 678-7629.

PDA Launches Farm Safety Initiative At FFA Breakfast

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Agriculture Secretary Designee Dennis C Wolff announced the creation of a new Farm Safety Education program at the Pennsylvania FFA Annual Legislative Breakfast, Tuesday.

"Pennsylvania is dedicated to continuing its mission to promote safety around farms," said Secretary Wolff. "One farm accident is one accident too many. We need to always 'begin safe, end safe,' around the farm and farm equipment. The Department of Agriculture is pleased to be partnering with the Pennsylvania FFA in launching its new Farm Safety Demonstration Program."

Through this new initiative, FFA Chapters across the Commonwealth are encouraged to develop interactive demonstrations to be used at county fairs, malls, schools, and other venues to educate the public about the value of farm safety.

Interested FFA Chapters can receive up to $1,000 for the development and construction of each demonstration project, made possible by the Curriculum and Instructional Development Grant Program.

Project proposals will be due in the Fall of 2003 and be awarded in the beginning of 2004 for the 2004 county and community fair season.

In recognition of FFA Chapter accomplishments in Farm Safety for 2002-03, Secretary Wolff awarded certificates of commendation to the chapter winners in the 2002 Fair Farm Safety Demonstration Contest, the 2003 Farm Show Safety Contest, and the 2003 Farm Safety Quiz Bowl-FFA Division.

The winners were:

2002 Fair Farm Safety Demonstrations: Manheim FFA, Manheim Central High School, Lancaster County; Tyrone Area FFA, Tyrone Area School District, Blair County; West Snyder FFA, Mid-West School District, Snyder County; Central Columbia FFA, Central Columbia School District, Columbia County; Spud Growers FFA, Coudersport High School, Potter County; Headwaters FFA, Northern Potter High School, Potter County; Upper Dauphin FFA, Upper Dauphin School District, Dauphin County; and Little Lions FFA, State College School District, Centre County.

2003 Farm Show Farm Safety Demonstrations: 1. Blackhawk High School, Beaver County, Demonstration "Log Splitters for Dummies"; and 2. Mifflinburg High School, Union County, Demonstration "Lawn Mower Safety."

Members of the Eastern York FFA Chapter met with to thank this year's SLLC sponsor Columbia Gas of Pennsylvania. Representing Columbia Gas in center back George Stark and Rob Boulware Also pictured on far right is Rep. Keith Gillespie from the 47th district.

Agriculture Secretary Designee Dennis C. Wolff addressed the conference at the Pennsylvania FFA Legislative Breakfast on Tuesday Morning.

2002-03 Farm Safety Quiz Bowl FFA Division: 1. Mifflinburg FFA, Mifflinburg High School, Union County; 2. West Snyder FFA, Mid-West School District, Snyder County; 3. Selinsgrove FFA, Selinsgrove Area High School, Snyder County; and 4. Manheim FFA, Manheim Central School District, Lancaster County.

The Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture (PDA), through its Bureau of Plant Industry, continues to promote farm safety and work to reduce the number of farm related accidents and deaths in Pennsylvania. It is the only state agency in the nation to have a full-time farm safety specialist on staff.

While encouraging promotion of farm safety, the PDA oversees several Farm Safety and Occupational Health programs. The Small Grant Program provides funding to organizations to host and present Farm Safety Programs. Most recently, two FFA Chapters, six County Extension programs, four county Farm Bureaus, and ten fire, ambulance, rescue, and health organizations received up to $2,500 each for farm safety promotion.

The new Curriculum and Instructional Development Program is raising the bar of awareness on farm safety and rescue for safety and rescue personnel. The department is committed to the development of farm safety programs across Pennsylvania and has supported The Pennsylvania State University's Pennsylvania Ag Rescue Program.

The Tuition Assistance Program encourages paramedics, medical personnel, and members of the agriculture community to attend training programs by defraying some of the training costs.

The PDA hosts Farm Safety Programs at Ag Progress Days, Farm City Day, and the PA Farm Show.

Secretary Wolff also noted that the PDA is the first agriculture department in the nation to participate in the Farm Safety 4 Just Kids Program. Teaching farm safety to children is a commitment by the Department as a member of this program.

Teaching children the dangers of not following the rules when using farm tractors or equipment helps to ensure that Pennsylvania's children will be able to safely reap the joys of helping their family around the farm. PDA is committed to assisting Pennsylvania's 59,000 farm families to think "Safety First." For more information about the department's Farm Safety Programs, contact the PDA's Bureau of Plant Industry at (717) 772-5206.

FFA State Legislative Leadership Conference Features Innovative Program

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — This year's FFA State Legislative Leadership Conference (SLLC) featured a unique program where students conducted simulated legislative sessions of the Pennsylvania Senate and House of Representatives.

More than 320 representatives from FFA chapters throughout the state attended the 16th annual conference at the Holiday Inn in Grantville, March 9-11.

This year the state FFA officers and second-year scholars were responsible for putting together a new version of SLLC, complete with a House of Representatives and a Senate.

Approximately 220 members were assigned to the "House of Representatives" and approximately 65 members were selected for the "Senate."

The House and Senate members then proceeded to discuss and amend a total of six bills that have actually been presented in the Pennsylvania Legislature with some pertaining to agricultural issues. Beforehand, copies of the bills were provided for the students to familiarize themselves with the legislation.

These included House Bills 954, 606, and 2350 and Senate Bills 1325, 816, and 1413. Their subjects dealt with agricultural trespassing; depositing waste on highways, property, or waters; amending the Public Eating and Drinking Place Law; animal exhibition sanitation; assaults with a biological agent on animal, fowl, or honey bees; and protecting agricultural operations from nuisance suits and ordinances under certain circumstances.

Students were able to see firsthand what it takes to actually get a bill through the legislative process. Parliamentary Procedure was taught and used extensively by the all the participants.

In addition to their own "legislative sessions," the FFA students met with their state senators and representatives in Harrisburg and went on tours of the Hershey Chocolate plant and the Milton Hershey School.

The conference concluded with a Legislative Breakfast at the Crowne Plaza Hotel, next to the Capitol in downtown Harrisburg Tuesday morning.

More than 60 state senators and representatives attended the closing event. Secretary of Agriculture Designee Dennis C. Wolff, along with representatives from the sponsoring company, Columbia Gas of Pennsylvania, gave remarks. Secretary of Education Designee Vicki Phillips also offered greetings from the Department of Education, which oversees the FFA programs.

Dairies: Consider Cheese-Making

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — It may sound a bit cheesy, but a dairy economist in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences said some dairy farmers in Pennsylvania may have to think outside the milk carton to survive in today's tough market.

With milk prices extremely low and feed prices high due to the drought that parched crops last summer, operators of small dairy farms across the state are being squeezed. Some are looking frantically for new sources of revenue to keep their businesses afloat, and Ken Bailey, associate professor of agricultural economics, has an idea — make cheese.

Not the bland, mass-produced American and mozzarella churned out in places like Wisconsin, but perhaps an earthy guda, a tangy feta or an extra-sharp cheddar with a taste specific and peculiar to the region of Pennsylvania where it is made. Before you scoff at this suggestion, Bailey said, consider the micro-brewery craze that swept across the country and revolutionized the beer-making business in the last 20 years or so. He believes the same thing could happen with cheese.

Not long ago, Bailey explained, dominant beer brands such as Budweiser and Miller had the market cornered and there weren't many alternatives. Then small breweries started cropping up all over, making distinctive-tasting fermented beverages in small batches.

To be sure, the microbrews. will never displace beer giants such as Anheuser Busch — but many brands have earned uncommon customer loyalty, and through niche marketing they sell thousands of gallons of beer annually.

Bailey believes "artisanal" or "designer" cheeses could have the same sort of market impact, and he said Pennsylvania — being the fourth largest dairy-producing state in the nation with many small herds and dairies — is in an ideal position to be on the cutting edge of the trend. The term "artisanal" comes from the word artisan, or craftsman, and relates to the skill needed to make exceptional cheese.

"I'm not suggesting that we try to compete with Kraft in the cheese business we couldn't," Bailey said. "But if you look at the cheese industry, it is all moving out West — immense factories use huge volumes of milk and make low-cost cheese. Only two cheeses in this country are made in great volume — American and mozzarella — with most of the latter going on pizza. Most of the cheese made in the United States is bland and boring. There is a tremendous opportunity for Pennsylvania dairy farmers to make distinctive, aged cheeses."

Dairy producers in other states are investigating this concept, too, according to Bailey, who notes that dairy farmers in Vermont have banded together to create a cheese association, and cheese from several different farms can be purchased on its Web site. "I think there is a market out there for really good farmstead cheese — artisanal cheese made in small batches," he said. "In Eastern Europe, farmers have three or four cows and make cheese at home. They take it to nearby markets to sell and the locals prefer it because the imported brands of cheese are too expensive."

Bailey believes Americans will consume more cheese now that scientists and doctors have realized that eating cheese is healthy.

"Americans are unsophisticated about cheese as compared to the French and other Europeans," he says. "Europeans eat much more cheese and they eat many more varieties. The European consumer is much more discriminating when it comes to cheese. But when the economy improves in this country and Americans' taste for cheese matures, the market will take off."

The question is, Bailey pointed out, how can small dairy farmers get into the farmstead cheese business? "Farmers must craft cheese in a low-cost way and keep marketing costs low," he says. "Cheese cooperatives and farmers' markets might be the answer."

Bailey cautions farmers that it won't be easy to begin producing cheese and that it will take innovative entrepreneurs to get into the niche market. "Artisanal cheese production does hold potential for smaller dairies in Pennsylvania, but they will have to deal with the high fixed cost of cheese-producing equipment. That would be where a state association would come in.

"And expectations must be realistic — I don't want to give the owner of a small, 50-Jersey cow farm that is just barely staying in business the impression they can switch to cheese and make millions.

"But as another revenue stream for small dairies, it holds promise."

Freezing Weather Delays Syrup Production

ITHACA, N.Y. — Freezing weather conditions have delayed most of Western New York maple syrup production by at least 10 days.

Preliminary reports indicate that many maple syrup producers were delayed in tapping their trees due to freezing weather conditions during late February and early March.

Reports by producers indicate that most maple trees will be tapped for maple syrup production by March 15 for western New York and that production will be that of an average year.

The prolonged freezing temperatures delayed our normal window for tapping trees by at least 10 days. In most areas, maple trees were still frozen solid in most places as of March 10. Tapping trees during freezing weather conditions promotes maple trees to crack and may cause permanent damage to the tree.

Regardless of current weather conditions, we do not expect the season to run longer due to the cold weather. On average the season in western New York ends on or about March 30th.

As we approach and enter into spring (March 21), the sun rises higher in the sky which contributes to additional radiant heat as a result of extended and more direct sunshine.

More direct sunshine contributes not only to warmer ambient air temperatures but significantly contributes to an increase in surface temperatures of the tree.

Consequently, an increase in radiant heat promotes a physiological change in the tree that triggers bud formation resulting in the formation of buddy sap which signifies the end of the tapping season. Buddy sap has a very unpleasant odor and many producers that specialize in only high quality syrup will stop collecting sap. Sap at the beginning of the season is water white, clear and transparent. It has a sweet taste and practically no odor.

During the week of March 10, we expect that start of a winter thaw (temperatures above 32 F) for a three to four day period that will trigger the first run of sap for many sugar bush operations.

Above average snowfall has contributed to saturation of most soils and for most areas the soil has not frozen to any significant depth. Consequently, we expect an initial heavy sap flow for most area producers.

This year's heavy snows will provide for logistical problems for many sugar bush operations. The snow pack (in some areas as much as 3 feet or more) will provide for difficult conditions for many producers so that they can get at their trees to tap as well as move sap to their sugarhouse to make syrup.

Ideal conditions for tapping are freezing temperatures at night and just above freezing temperatures during the day (32-45). This creates a differential in the pressure of the tree to encourage sap flow. Typically, the tree will generate 12 psi to encourage sap flow. Currently we have excellent subsoil moisture which will help ensure an adequate supply of soil moisture for sap production as well as a differential in pressure as caused by the temperature swings.

To date, a few maple syrup producers that have tapped are reporting minimal sap flow, however, the sugar content of this sap has been excellent (2.8 percent). Higher sugar contents are likely due to the past summer's drought. During a drought, abundant sunshine encourages increased photosynthesis production that may lead to increased sugar production.

In addition, the colder weather may also be promoting less movement of water within the tree, consequently contributing to a higher concentration of sugar within the sap flow. As a result, some producers are hoping that the first run of sap will produce a very highly desirable light and delicate flavored syrup. Maple syrup grades are light, medium, dark amber, grade B, and commercial.

SPECIAL EVENT: The New York State Maple Weekend, March 22-23, 2003. All participating sugarhouses will be open to the public statewide from 10 a.m.-4 p.m. For a list of participating sugarhouses go to www.mapleweekend.com.

Open House: Career Choices

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences will host prospective students at its 10th annual Open House Saturday, March 22, from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. here at the Hetzel Union Building.

"Teenagers have lots of questions when it comes to careers and employment," said Marianne Fivek, assistant to the dean for student recruitment and activities. "Our open house highlights opportunities in the agricultural sciences in an informal, relaxed setting where students can get personal attention.

"About 60 faculty, staff, and students from the college will be there to answer questions about the agricultural sciences and about university life," said Fivek.

Attendees can learn about careers in agricultural and related fields and the college's 18 undergraduate majors, including animal science, food science, landscape design, agribusiness management, agricultural and biological engineering and environmental resource management. The event will begin with an informational fair at 8 a.m., followed by a general session at 9 a.m. and academic advising sessions at 10:15 a.m.

To register for the open house or for more information, visit the World Wide Web at http://www.cas.psu.edu or contact the Office for Undergraduate Education at (814) 865-7521.

- Milk new animals last
- Maintain good ventilation
- Keep things clean
- Provide vaccination programs
- Avoid overcrowding, which creates stress
- Observe a sound nutrition program.

Gardner noted that cows that are sitting in stalls and chewing their cud are more comfortable and resistant to disease. If the cows are standing, they are not comfortable and stress could lower their immune system, setting up disease pressure on the farm.

Lou Moore, Penn State ag agronomist, debunked several "myths" about the ag industry at the Dairy Day.

Moore noted some of the good things about today's economy:
- Interest rates are at a 41-year low
- The national economy is at a period of essentially no inflation (at 1.2-1.8 percent)
- Though consumer confidence awaits the outcome of the potential next Gulf War, people have been taking advantage of special financing.

The bad news about the economy:
- Unemployment is at 5.8 percent nationally.
- Economic recovery is too mild.
- It was a "lousy" holiday season for retailers, with only 1.1 percent growth.
- The stock market declined 17 percent from last year.
- Surging oil prices and the prospects of war are bearing down hard on the economy.
- Ag needs "all the help it can get," said Moore. We're producing too much milk, meat, and eggs, he said.

Moore noted the U.S. has experienced the seventh consecutive year of dramatic corn yields, this one at nine billion bushels. We use more than nine billion bushels per year, however, and have only a 924 million bushel inventory. About 169 million bushels are used in Pennsylvania.

A dramatic note: milk cow operations from 1992-2001 decreased 43 percent. In another 10 years, Moore noted, will we still have a dairy industry?

Moore said that in 1980, there were 780,000 hog operations in the country. In 2002, that dropped to 70,000 hog operations.

Clearly, there are larger farms and more consolidation.

But still, 80 percent of the dairy operations throughout the U.S. have less than 100 cows.

One myth that Moore wants to dispel is that people believe the New York ag industry is bigger than Pennsylvania. That's simply not true. In total farm receipts, New York ranks at $3.42 billion while Pennsylvania towers over it at $4.4 billion. Lancaster County is the largest dairy county in the U.S.

Competition for the Pennsylvania dairy farmer now comes from California and other western states, dairy imports from other countries, New York, South Carolina, and the "farmer down the road."

Moore urged producers to consider crop insurance, which brings on average about $3 for every $1 spent. Last year, insurance provided about $10 for every $1 spent.

These days, you can't simply grow a product and find some ways to get "rid" of it.

"Become a marketer," said Moore. "You need to know what the co-op is doing and why they're doing it."

Glenn Shirk, Shirk's Dairy $ense, reviewed his research on the "power of one more lactation" that helps to provide more returns for the dairy producer investment dollar.

Shirk, a longtime dairy agent in Lancaster who recently retired from extension, told producers that "cows are your best investment, period."

He asked those who attended dairy days, "When's the last time your equipment reproduced?"

Shirk provided reasoning to invest and manage the capital of the dairy business wisely. "You need to focus heavily enough on preserving the profit margin," said Shirk. "Work with your service people and get serious about tackling those problems at the source. We're talking about your investments, your livelihood."

Shirk said producers need to be considerate of several factors:
- Be considerate about cow udders
- Ensure the health of the cow's lungs
- Group heifers by size and social status
- Invest in cow health and comfort
- Provide cows with fresh grass and air
- Work closely with the veterinarian
- Don't let milking routines ruin the cows
- Think and manage the operation — work wisely
- Place the best, most skilled people in the correct positions
- Rely on customer operations, including sales and service, as sources of help
- Can your business operate without you? Do you have a backup plan?

"Your own destiny is in your own hands, in many cases," he said. Estate planning, Shirk noted, begins not when you are fading out of the business, "but when you enter into the business."

Speakers also included Vinton Smith, extension dairy farm management agent, on overall dairy business performance; Nevin Dourte, Ruhl Insurance, on crop insurance; and Bruce Kreider, White Oak Mills, on nutrition strategies to increase profits.

More information from Dairy Days is scheduled to appear in the April 19 Foraging Around section of Lancaster Farming.

Miller Resolution Recognizes Future Farmers

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Pennsylvania celebrated FFA Week recently under a resolution sponsored by Rep. Sheila Miller (R-129) and approved by the House of Representatives.

"It is because of organizations like FFA that train our future farmers and state leaders that agriculture remains the top industry in our commonwealth," Miller said. "This organization makes a positive impact on the lives of thousands of students by encouraging cooperation, promoting good citizenship, and inspiring patriotism."

The focus of this year's FFA celebration is "The Cornerstone of Success," which illustrates how the organization's programs are building tomorrow's leaders and preparing them for the challenges of the future.

Formerly known as Future Farmers of America, the state organization was chartered in 1929 and has approximately 8,000 members in 147 chapters. The nationwide membership of FFA is more than 450,000.

The national organization dates back to 1928 when, during the National Livestock Judging Contest, 33 students from 18 states joined together to establish the organization with the goal of providing leadership training for farm boys.

Girls were admitted to membership in FFA starting in the 1960s, and today they make up more than a quarter of the organization's membership.

FFA has associations in all 50 states, as well as in Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands.

Lancaster County Weekly Cattle

New Holland, Pa.
Report Supplied By USDA
Friday, March 14, 2003

	CATTLE	CALVES
THIS WEEK	2784	1758
LAST WEEK	2680	1765
LAST YEAR	2591	1780

Compared to last week, slaughter steers sold 1 00 higher at the two early week runs, with steers trading a full 1 00 lower late in the week The early week sales included a couple pretty good runs, with trading moderately active However, the 1 00 higher market early in the week was compared to a sharply lower Thursday market the prior week The quality of the stock has tapered off over the past couple of weeks with buyers trying to own high Choice and Prime steers noting having a lot of luck The Western direct feedlots moved their steers from 76.00 to mostly 77 00 this week, which is mostly steady to 1 00 lower This can be considered a moral victory for Western feeders as the early week sales of 74 50-75 50 made it look like the trade would be lower The Board was very helpful to the direct trade this week, after trading lower most of the week the April live cattle contract moved up 1.10 on Thursday to close at 74 25 Most local feeders are watching the summer contracts at the Merc very closely as they are currently sitting around 67 00-69 00, which would be a shock for the cash trade to dip to those levels as producers have come accustomed to the 80 00 market. Slaughter Holstein steers sold steady to firm early in the week, trading weak to 1 00 lower to close the week out Slaughter heifers sold steady early, trending with a weaker undertone late in the week Slaughter cows sold 3.00-5 00 lower this week as a weaker boneless beef market has cow buyers backpedaling Slaughter bulls sold steady to weak for the entirety of the week This week's reported supply in Lancaster County included 929 steers, 179 heifers, 1242 cows, 170 bulls, with 264 head of feeder cattle

March 30 Benefit To Aid Fire Victims

COVINGTON (Tioga Co.) — On Feb. 10, life changed for the Wivell family when their life's work was ravaged by fire.

The milking barn was destroyed, claiming 40 milking Jerseys, 10 calves, 20 sheep, and 100 lambs. The fire also destroyed the contents of a well-stocked machinery repair shed, five tractors, a TMR mixer, four-wheelers, snowmobiles, other equipment, and tons of hay.

"We're still compiling the list," said Mary Wivell, who owns the farm with her husband Don. The two were on vacation when the blaze tore through the barn.

What they learned had happened was that the morning milking had just been completed and their son, Tom, had gone home for breakfast. A neighbor noticed flames coming from the barn and knocked on the Wivell's door, but they were not at home, so he went to another house to call for help. By the time Tom returned to the barn, the flames prevented him from entering the structure.

Don had planned to retire from milking cows in 2007 and expand the beef, sheep, and goat enterprises. With the loss of so many milking cows and the entire milking facility, they are not sure if they will continue to milk cows. They have, however, already ordered a building to replace the garage and machinery shed and plan to build some sort of barn for the animals.

"It's all up in the air," said Mary.

The Wivells can't say enough about the friends and neighbors who have helped them at this difficult time. Numerous friends and neighbors helped move cows and prepare a vacant barn, owned by Scott House, for milking. Others have helped in many other ways.

"I can't begin thanking everyone," said Mary. "You could name 100 names and you couldn't get all of them."

Further help will be given in the form of a benefit dinner on Sunday, March 30, from noon to 4 p.m. at the Tioga County Fairgrounds in Whitneyville. The dinner will include ham, stuffed chicken breasts, meatballs, parsley buttered potatoes, green beans, cabbage salad, vegetable tray, rolls and butter, homemade desserts, milk coffee and tea for $10 per person.

Entertainment and other activities will be taking place all afternoon.

Donations for the Wivell family can be earmarked for the Don and Mary Wivell Fire Fund and sent to First Citizens National Bank, attn: Dot Rakoski, 15 S. Main St., Mansfield, PA 16933.

Farm Group Seeks Risk Management Hearings

WASHINGTON, D.C. — National Farmers Union board of directors recently requested a complete congressional review of risk management tools for farmers and ranchers.

"Farm risk management programs have not been able to address the most recent weather-related disasters that have spread across the nation in the past two years," said NFU President Dave Frederickson. "The lack of adequate, permanent risk management tools leaves many producers at risk. The current voids that exist force producers to seek congressional ad hoc disaster assistance year after year, which has become increasingly difficult to rely upon."

In a letter to the Senate and House agriculture committees, the Farmers Union board proposed congressional hearings to explore the inadequacies of risk management programs. The farm leaders also outlined the following goals for farm risk management programs:

- Enhanced adequacy, availability and affordability of coverage for all agricultural commodities, including livestock and specialty crops;
- Improved production and quality loss risk protection for all commodities to address problems associated with both catastrophic and shallow losses in an equitable manner;
- Answers to specific problems with crop insurance such as prevented planting, quality losses, dry-land production on irrigated fields and established prices; and
- Improved protection for producers impacted by multiple-year disasters.

Frederickson used the recent passage of farm disaster aid in the Omnibus Appropriations Act of 2003 as an example of the need for improved risk management tools.

Farm Bill Crop Meetings Set

LEBANON (Lebanon Co.) and DAUPHIN (Dauphin Co.) — Farm Service Agency (FSA) offices in Lebanon and Dauphin counties will conduct Farm Bill informational meetings this coming week for farmers interested in signing up for the direct and countercyclical payment programs.

The deadline for signing up for these crop-assistance programs is April 1.

The Lebanon County meeting will take place at 10 a.m. on Monday, March 17, at the Lebanon Valley Ag Center, 2120 Cornwall Road, Lebanon.

The Dauphin County meeting is set for 10 a.m. on Tuesday, March 18 at the Dauphin County Ag Center, 1451 Peters Mountain Road, Dauphin.

"MAKE HAY WHEN THE SUN SHINES!"

Late Heading Grasses Give You Flexibility

BARIDANA

More leaf and less stem! A late heading less bunchy orchardgrass with excellent rust tolerance. Has out-yielded Pennlate at Rock Springs, PA and heads out about 7 days later. Baridana is softer than old hay types and thus has better digestibility. Baridana is a key grass in many of our grazing mixes. We have many happy users.

Plant with alfalfa

BARAULA

A very late heading less aggressive orchardgrass great for seeding with alfalfa. Baraula has soft fine leaves. Our Alfamate contains Baraula and Hakari Alaska Brome. Baraula heads out about 10 to 14 days later than Pennlate. Since Baraula is less aggressive, it tends not to push alfalfa out of the mix. Less clumps and very leafy.

For mixed hay

HAYMASTER HAY MIX

An easy-to-dry grass alfalfa hay mixture. Ideal mixed hay for the cattle and horse markets. Its fast drying quality will reduce the risk of rain damage and moldy hay. Excellent dry weather productivity. This mix includes Baridana and Baraula orchardgrass, Baralfa 42 IQ alfalfa, Hakari Alaska Brome, Kootenai Timothy, and Marathon Reed Canarygrass

BARENBRUG

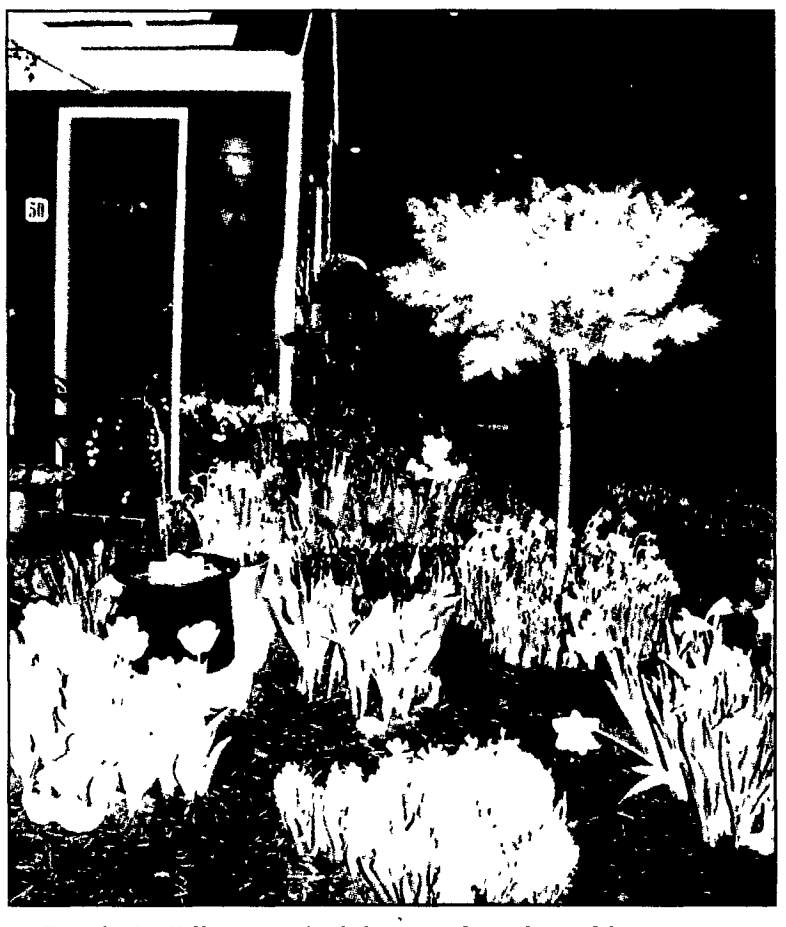
Flower Show Blooms With Possibilities

Imagine the time and skill involved in having plantings at their peak for the nine-day show.

Each individual flower is tagged so that visitors can jot down the names of plants, trees, and shrubbery they want to add to their home landscaping designs.



Rustic buildings and elaborate facades of houses were erected to show how plantings add accents to the surroundings.

PHILADELPHIA — Brilliant colors and fragrances of hyacinths, roses, and herbs mingled together at the world-famous Philadelphia Flower Show last week.

For the sun-deprived, it seemed as if the growing season had finally arrived.

Although few of the lush garden exhibits were projects that do-it-yourselfers can duplicate, the show sparks gardening dreams and offers the opportunity to learn from the workshops, lectures, and personal one-on-one time with top gardeners from around the world.

The spectacular landscaped exhibits with towering trees, blooming bushes and gentle ponds appear to be permanent grounds. In reality, the exhibits were only erected days before the show opening and were torn down at closing.

The ability to force blooms of spring, summer, and fall flowers at this time of the year is no easy feat for growers. It requires horticultural skills of adjusting light, humidity, and carbon dioxide levels in greenhouses, where thousands of plants are grown in preparation for the annual event.

Flowers on display are name-tagged so that visitors can jot down the names of plants they want to include in their landscaping themes.

This year's "Festival of the Flowers" carried a Latin theme with many tropical flowers. Columns, urns, waterfalls, water garden, and indoor water ponds were interspersed among the displays. Patios, walkways, and walls used a variety of masonry materials in unique designs.

One of the most popular spots is the marketplace with 140 national and international vendors. People bring large shopping bags and even carts to fill with the latest gadgets to make gardening easier, or one of the many flower-related gift items to decorate their homes.

Crowds gathered around a vendor from the United Kingdom. Called the Great Hang Up, the stand featured metal brackets used to hang any type of a pot or container indoors and outdoors.

Plants, flowers, and almost everything imaginable connected with outdoor living were available for sale.

It's impossible to capture the magnitude of the magnificent displays, but here are a few glimpses to encourage you to mark your calendar for next year's show, March 7-14, 2004.

Patios, walkways, and walls incorporate a variety of masonry materials among plantings to help Philadelphia Flower Show visitors visualize the possibilities available for outdoor designs. In addition, vendors from around the world were on hand as resources for answering questions and purchasing materials.

Blossoming trees are tucked into landscape settings that appear to be permanent at the Philadelphia Flower Show.

This Italian kitchen display is typical of the Latin theme for this year's event.

On Being a Farm Wife

Joyce Bupp

A battleground.

That's what it is. A battleground.

Signs of destruction, everywhere. Piles of residual trash. Fallen comrades. Even walking through is hazardous, requiring careful steps and a sharp eye to avoid dangerous obstacles.

And that's just the backyard.

Mother Nature fired her first shots months ago, with early December's preview of the winter to come. Ice storms are generally more a March phenonemon around here than a post-Thanksgiving happening. It was our first introduction to the good, old-fashioned winter to follow.

And what a mess it's made.

Fallen trees and limbs. Raw, jagged-edged pieces of wood, scattered about the ground like so many pick-up sticks strewn about in a game. Multiple ice storms wounded our trees, crashing bits and pieces of limbs, branches, and twigs of varied sizes all about the yard.

Residue from the mortally slain old pussywillow still lingers, despite an early assault on it with chainsaw and clean-up crew to break down its fallen carcass into more manageable and usable pieces. Before the chunks could be moved, though, snow piled in over them in layers, which in turn were thoroughly soaked with rain, al' of which then froze into giant, funky-shaped, ice chunks.

Which was actually the case for most of the fallout around the yard. All of which became laden with more snow, more rain, more ice, and finally, the Big Snow. That swirled around into impressive dunes in the backyard, requiring pass-throughs with the big tractor and its heavy blade just to clear a space through which to walk to scatter birdseed for our hungry regulars.

In the process, the blade gouged out chunks of ground and the wheel carved deep tracks in the glacial pack. Somewhat uneven to start with, the lawn now mostly resembles the pothole-strewn interstate betweed the state line. Cascades of snowmelt runoff, detoured from their usual engineered flow around the yard by frozen flotsam and jetsam, took a meandering path instead through the lawn, adding ice slicks to the rough and tumble effect.

You don't want to go there. Especially in the dark, when you chance tripping on a frozen-fast branch and falling on your face onto a sharply-jagged stick protruding out of the glacial residue.

While most of the region was buried beneath the wintry snowpack, the mess could be ignored as an out-of-sight, out-of-mind issue. Goodness knows, just keeping up with the outside chores most of the last three months has kept us plenty occupied.

And, the stuff was all frozen fast to the ground, anyway.

So when the lawn-care publication turned up on the kitchen table a few days ago, I just looked at it and sighed. The picture of plush, perfect green grass on the cover is a shocking contrast to the reality of our backyard. To use a popular, politically-correct description, the yard is a "challenge."

Still, as I scattered a bucketful of dirt and debris under the old pine tree, sweepings from around our diminishing woodpile, a tiny finger of hope and optimism waved at me. It was the slender shoot of a small bulb, yellow-green and healthy, poking up through the rough, ragged residue.

That — and the flock of robins cavorting in the grass on a sunny road bank earlier this week — have finally convinced me that spring is truly on the way.

The snow shovel can just stay parked by the back door a bit longer. But I might prop a lawn rake there beside it.

Maybe I can scuff loose some worms from under the leaves for those hungry robins.

Brochure For Slow Cooker Meals Available

It's convenient and easy, and a favorite change among time-stressed cooks. It's also a tasty way to prepare less tender beef cuts. What is "it"? A slow cooker!

The slow cooker is more popular than ever. An enticing brochure, Slow Cooker Beef Meals, showcases six delicious beef recipes. Soup, stew, chili, pot roast, beef wraps, and a sandwich star in the yummy line-up. In addition, helpful hints ensure success, even for the novice.

Each recipe is simple to assemble, and results are guaranteed to please the palate. Plus, you'll be greeted by irresistible aromas as you walk in the door. But the best part is dinner is ready and waiting.

For a free copy, send a self-addressed, stamped number 10 business-size envelope to New York Beef Industry Council, P.O. Box 250, Westmoreland, N.Y. 13490. One brochure per envelope.

Juice Abuse

Fruit juice tastes good, children love it, and parents are happy because their children are drinking something healthy.

So, what is the problem?

Children may be drinking too much of a good thing.

The American Academy of Pediatrics says adults need to cut back on the amount of fruit juice infants, toddlers, and young children are consuming. Adults must also distinguish between 100 percent fruit juice and juice drinks that can contain as little as 10 percent fruit juice. Even though many fruit juices contain potassium, as well as Vitamins A and C that are beneficial, the Academy believes that drinking excessive amounts of fruit juice is associated with diarrhea, stomach problems, malnutrition, and tooth decay.

Before six months of age, infants should not drink juice. When a child is between one and six years of age, the amount of fruit juice consumed should be limited daily to four to six ounces.

Once a child is over seven, juice intakes should be limited to eight to 12 ounces a day. This is because many fruit juices contain carbohydrates in the form of sugars. Juice contains no fiber unless pulp is included and contains only a small amount of protein and minerals. It is healthier for children to eat whole fruits as part of the recommended daily fruit intake. As an alternative to juice, don't forget water.

Balance For Healthy Kids

Before you get home tonight, you'll have finished a full day of work, picked-up the children from day care, and shopped for groceries. It's between 6:30 p.m. or 8:00 p.m. and everybody is tired and cranky. Just to get through, you decide to stop for something fast for supper. Does this sound like your family?

Many children are making choices as regular consumers of fast foods. What might have been a treat for a child's celebration at the fast food place is becoming more common as families are rushed to "fit it all in," day after day. Whether it's the night for dance practice, a softball game, or music lessons, we frequently choose to take young kids to fast food places. Their diets tend to be more high fat foods and less variety from the Food Guide Pyramid.

Although kids can't always express what they need, research shows kids will make appropriate healthy choices if offered a variety of foods over a period of time. Adults need to provide the variety throughout the week: a citrus food every day, deep yellow and dark green vegetable at least every other day. Teach good eating habits by allowing children to decide how much food and which foods without making meal time a battle. They take clues from how we eat and model our healthful choices. A week's worth of meals that offer a variety of meats, fish or high protein legumes, milk, cheese and yogurt, colorful fruits and vegetables served in a variety of ways, cooked or raw, are beneficial to everyone.

Watch for signals to teach good eating habits. Just as babies learn to signal parents that they have had enough to eat, too much food on a child's plate can be overwhelming. It is better to offer children small portions and have them ask for another spoon of food they enjoyed. Children recognize that some flavors are appealing, food has shape and texture.

Toddlers who experiment with foods tend to have better eating habits that last a life time. Plan snacks that combine foods from two groups to supplement the small meals that toddlers eat to meet their daily recommended nutrients. Offer water for thirst, juice and milk for foods at meals and snacks.

Sharing tasks in the kitchen teaches basic skills: count the pieces for a place setting or add two cups of cheese with the macaroni.

Encourage your child to help with grocery shopping and prepare food for the family. They love to see somebody eat what they made and sometimes will try it because they mixed it. While children spoon food on their own plate they practice eye-hand coordination; managing the peas on a spoon is a lot harder compared to a spoon of mashed potatoes. Use food to teach color; which foods are green?

When you are thinking of stopping for a quick supper again, consider the alternatives. Our children learn so much with meals at home. Tonight might be the first time she tries putting the spread on her bread, or he cuts a baked potato.

Without distractions of others in the restaurant or the television blaring, maybe they'll tell you about their day or together you'll plan a family day trip.

A meal that offers two vegetables, a fruit, milk, whole grain bread and meat provides essential nutrients and lots of potential for rich family memories. Let the good times roll. Maybe there is even time for you to walk together after supper.

To top off the day, get a good night's sleep and together you will reduce the risk of obesity, diabetes, and grow healthy.

Project ABLE Helps People Understand What It's Like To Live With A Disability

HONESDALE (Wayne Co.) — If you've never experienced it yourself, it's hard to imagine what it's like to live with a disability everyday. That's exactly why a group of parents in Hazleton got together and started Project ABLE (Acceptance By Learning Experiences).

Project ABLE consists of a series of workstations that simulate different disabilities. Kim Huff, one of the project's founders, explains, "By using a workstation, you get a sense of what it's like to live with a disability." Huff also explains that they keep the experience fun because when everyone is laughing, you take away the fear and embarrassment of asking questions.

Penn State Cooperative Extension and the Pennsylvania Department of Public Welfare, Pennsylvania Pathways Program are sponsoring a Project ABLE workshop for child care providers, parents, teachers, and anyone else working with children. The workshop is scheduled for Thursday, March 27 from 6:30 p.m.-8:30 p.m. at the Lakeside School, Honesdale. Call (570) 253-5970, extension 239 to register. Cost for the program is $1 to cover the cost of materials and refreshments.

At the workshop you'll have the opportunity to experience what it is like to live with several different disabilities by visiting workstations. One workstation simulates Attention Deficit Disorder/ Attention Deficit Hyperactivity Disorder and/or Dyslexia. At this station, you will be given a set of headphones (which magnifies the sound around you) to wear, given verbal instructions and asked to complete a writing exercise. To simulate dyslexia, you are given a worksheet and asked to complete it by looking in a mirror.

At the gross motor station, you have to climb stairs or catch a ball while your arms or legs are restrained in some way. You might also be asked to get around in the room with a wheelchair. The communication station focuses on speech, hearing and memory, and another station will help you understand what it is like to have a neurological disorder or arthritis.

Debra Bryant, Penn State Cooperative Extension Educator in Wayne County, and herself, the parent of a special needs child, invites everyone to join in this evening of learning and fun. You will get answers to all your questions about the issues surrounding children with special needs. You will also learn about the Special Kids Network, an information and referral service for families seeking services for their children. The group also facilitates connections between community organizations, agencies, and individuals to enhance or create services for children with special needs.

For more information or to register, call the Wayne County office of Penn State Cooperative Extension at (570) 253-5970, extension 239. Childcare providers will receive 2 DPW training hours for participating.

What You Should Know About Wild Rice

Minnesota cultivated wild rice puts a clever spin on everyday food. Discover the versatility, affordability, and most importantly, the healthy benefits of this wholesome gourmet grain.

Nutritionally speaking, Minnesota cultivated wild rice is hard to beat. It contains no fat, sugar, or cholesterol while providing an excellent source of dietary fiber, potassium, and protein.

Here are some often Asked Questions about wild rice.

Does the volume of wild rice increase when cooked? 1 cup uncooked wild rice equals approximately 3-4 cups cooked wild rice — that's 6 to 8 servings from just one cup uncooked wild rice!

Is wild rice expensive? At $5 per pound, it's only about 23 cents per serving!

How long can I keep wild rice? Uncooked wild rice keeps up to 10 years in an air-tight container. Cooked wild rice (plain) keeps 1 week refrigerated. Drain well; store in air-tight container.

How do I prepare wild rice? Wild rice is easy to prepare! Add 1 cup uncooked cultivated wild rice to 3-4 cups boiling water. Return to boil; stir. Cover and simmer approximately 30-45 minutes or until kernels just start to open. Drain any excess liquid.

After cooking with wild rice you will define your preferred cook time and water content — texture of cooked wild rice is a personal preference. For a chewier texture, cook for less time. For a tender, fluffier texture, cook longer.

Can I freeze wild rice? Absolutely — cooking and freezing ahead of time turns wild rice into a convenience food! Plain will keep about 6 months in your freezer. Drain well; store in air-tight containers. To use, thaw in refrigerator overnight, or microwave on "defrost" setting a few minutes.

Can I use wild rice in sweetened recipes? Wild rice has a tendency to revert back to hard kernels when combined with sweeteners. Over-cooking and chopping wild rice helps prevent this from happening. Sweetened recipes are best when served within 24 hours.

Is wild rice nutritious? Yes, wild rice is nutritious! It's a high-fiber complex carbohydrate, high in quality protein and low in fat, with only 114 calories per half-cup serving.

Here is a recipe using wild rice.

WILD RICE GUMBO

½ cup flour
2 slices bacon, chopped
1 pound beef polska kielbasa, cut into bite-sized chunks
1 medium onion, chopped
2 celery ribs, sliced
2 bell peppers (assorted color), chopped
4 scallions, sliced
3 cloves garlic, minced
2 cans (14 ounces each) chicken broth
1 can (14 ounces) beef broth
1 can (28 ounces) diced tomatoes
¼ cup chopped fresh parsley
1 tablespoon Cajun seasoning
2 bay leaves
4 cups cooked wild rice
1 pound small raw shrimp, peeled (approximately 50)
1 tablespoon file powder (optional)
salt and pepper, to taste
1-2 teaspoons hot pepper sauce (optional)

Preheat large skillet over medium heat 2 minutes. Add flour; stir constantly until dark beige (approximately 5 minutes — don't scorch). Immediately transfer to plate. In a large saucepan, cook bacon until starting to crisp; add kielbasa, onion, celery, peppers, scallions, and garlic. Cover; cook 5 minutes. Uncover.

Cook, stirring occasionally until vegetables are lightly browned; stir in flour. Gradually stir in broth; add tomatoes, parsley, Cajun seasoning, and bay leaves.

Partially cover; simmer 40 minutes. Add wild rice, shrimp, and file powder; simmer 10 minutes. Season with salt, pepper, and hot pepper sauce. Remove bay leaves before serving. Makes 8-10 servings.

For additional wild rice soup recipes, send a self-addressed stamped envelope to Minnesota Cultivated Wild Rice Council, Attn: Soup-er Wild Rice Recipes, 4630 Churchill Street, Suite #1, St. Paul, MN 55126.

Pie Contest

WASHINGTON (Washington Co.) — As part of Ag Days At The Washington Mall, the Washington County Cattlemen's Association will again sponsor the Old-Fashion Apple Pie Contest on March 22.

The contest will feature a junior division (up to 21 years of age) and a senior division (22+ years of age). It is recommended that the pies be in a non-returnable glass pie plate.

Judges will be judging the pies to be auctioned to raise money for the Advanced Education Support Grant. The grant is designed to help defray expenses for post-secondary education. Three junior members of the Washington County Cattlemen's Association were awarded scholarships at the annual banquet in October. The proceeds from the pie auction represent the main funding source for the scholarship. The WCCA is proud of its scholarship program and the juniors who have been honored by it.

Pie entries will be received at the Washington County Cattlemen's booth located in the center of the Washington Mall from noon to 2 p.m., Saturday, March 22. Judging will begin promptly at 2 p.m.

Consuming Thoughts

Most experts agree that increasing your intake of fruits and vegetables may help prevent cancer, heart disease, and other chronic disease, yet most Americans don't even eat the recommended minimum five servings a day.

Here are seven tips for eating more fruits and vegetables:

1. Start your day with at least two fruits, in addition to whole-grain bread, cereal or some other from of grain. Try citrus fruit or juice and perhaps a banana or some cantaloupe, mango or apple. Eat prunes and raisins for variety.

2. When planning meals, think of vegetables and starches as a main dish instead of the poultry or meat. For those meat, potato or rice and green vegetables meals, add a salad and another cooked vegetable and cut back on the meat.

3. Don't overlook cooked fruits. Try making a fruit compote with apples, peaches or pears, adding some apple juice and cinnamon for flavor and some honey or sugar to taste. Serve with a low-fat or nonfat yogurt or use as a topping for a frozen dessert or breakfast cereal.

4. Eat fruits and veggies as snacks. Always keep carrots, peppers, broccoli, cherry tomatoes and fruit on hand. Buy or make nonfat dips.

5. Keep staples on hand, like canned kidney beans, chickpeas and other legumes to salads, pasta sauces and stews. Stock the refrigerator with peeled baby carrots and other read to eat produce.

6. Eat more cruciferous vegetables like broccoli, cabbage, Brussels sprouts, cauliflower and kale, which are high in vitamins and minerals and other anticancer substances. Try precut cabbage for homemade cole slaw or steam it for a side dish. Add these vegetables to soups, pureed, if you like. Add these vegetables to salads and stir fry meals.

7. Look for other ways to add fruits and vegetables to recipes. Leftover veggies are great for topping a baked potato. Add grated carrot to tuna salad or gelatin salads. Sliced oranges or grapefruit are great with salad greens, especially in the winter when tomatoes are not at their best. Tomatoes, topped with bread crumbs and a little cheese, can be baked along with fish. Save small quantities of leftover vegetables in a container in the freezer and add to soups and stews for economy and extra nutrients and fiber.

Here's a great recipe that combines fruit and grains.

SPINACH STRAWBERRY SALAD

Sesame seeds (about 1 tablespoon)
Salt and pepper to taste
2 tablespoons sugar
¼ cup salad oil
2 tablespoons red wine vinegar
1 bunch spinach, cleaned, stemmed
Minced garlic to taste
1 cup strawberries, sliced or chunked
Dry mustard to taste
1½ teaspoons fresh dill or ½ teaspoon dried dill; Toast sesame seeds in dry skillet or hot oven several minutes, tossing often; let cool. Combine sugar, vinegar and garlic, dry mustard, salt and pepper. Whisk in oil in thin stream. Toss with spinach, strawberries, dill, and sesame seeds. Four serving.

MOM'S COUNTRY BRAISED PORK CHOPS

4 pork shoulder steaks, ¼-inch thick
2 tablespoons canola oil
1 small onion, chopped
1 tablespoon flour or more to coat chops
1 10-ounce can cream of mushroom soup
1 3-ounce can sliced mushrooms, do not drain
8 small red potatoes, quartered
4 medium carrots, peeled, sliced ¼-inch pieces (about 2 cups)
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
½ teaspoon dried rosemary

In a large skillet over med-high heat cook onion in canola oil until golden and tender. Push to one side of pan.

To cook floured chops: brown well on both sides. Take out chops and stir in undiluted soup, mushrooms with liquid, remaining ingredients. Heat to a boil.

Put chops back in skillet, reduce heat to low. Cover and simmer 1 hour or until meat and vegetables are tender. This is a one skillet dinner.

TOASTY CHEESE BAKE

8 slices bread
butter
1 pound ground beef
¼ cup chopped onion
2 tablespoons chopped celery
1 tablespoon mustard
½ teaspoon salt
1 cup shredded cheese
1 egg, slightly beaten
¾ cup milk
½ teaspoon pepper
⅛ teaspoon dry mustard

Heat oven to 350°.

Toast bread and butter on both sides. Brown meat and onion. Alternate layers of toast, meat, and cheese in greased 9×9×2-inch pan. Mix remaining ingredients in blender. Pour over layers. Bake uncovered 30 to 35 minutes. Makes 4-6 servings.

TACO PIZZA

Spread a can of crescent rolls on a pizza pan and bake until slightly brown.

Brown 1 pound ground beef and spread about 1 cup spaghetti sauce on crust. Add beef and some cheese. Bake again until hot and cheese is melted. Take out of oven and top with lettuce, tomatoes, and sour cream or ranch dressing.

OVEN MEATBALLS

1 egg, beaten
2 tablespoons milk
¼ cup bread crumbs
1 pound ground beef or turkey
¼ cup finely chopped onion
½ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper

Heat oven to 425°. Spray 13×9×2-inch pan with nonstick cooking spray.

In a large bowl combine all ingredients. Shape mixture into about 18 (1½-inch) meatballs. Place in pan and bake 15-20 minutes or until fully cooked.

This is a simple but delicious recipe. I have tried both turkey and beef and both are good. This recipe also freezes well. To freeze place on cookie sheet and put in freezer until frozen then you can put them in another container. This way they won't stick together.

STUFFED MEATLOAF

2 pounds ground beef
1½ cup milk
2 cups bread crumbs
2 eggs, beaten
1 tablespoons minced onion
2 teaspoons salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
1 tablespoon paprika
1 tablespoon parsley flakes

Mix well in order given. Then set aside and prepare the following.

4 cups bread crumbs
½ cup minced onions
½ cup celery, chopped
½ cup hot butter
2 teaspoons salt
1 teaspoon poultry seasoning
½ cup hot water
1 tablespoon parsley flakes

Saute onions and celery in butter. Toss together the bread, onions, celery, and seasonings then mix in hot water.

Put half of meat mixture into a 8 or 9-inch square baking pan to about 1-inch thickness. Then pat over the bread dressing and finally cover with meat mixture. Bake in 350° oven about 1½ hours or until done.

Place the pan in a shallow pan of water during the baking period to prevent the edges from getting too brown.

The meatloaf is cut in squares and may be served with a mushroom gravy but since the loaf is quite moist the gravy isn't necessary. Makes 8 to 10 servings.

VEAL PARMESAN

2 pounds ground veal
½ cup flour
1 teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon pepper
1 large egg
2 tablespoons milk
¼ cup flavored bread crumbs
¼ cup grated parmesan cheese
6 tablespoons butter
6 slices American cheese
1 10¾-ounce can condensed tomato soup
¼ cup water

Divide the ground veal in 6 portions and shape into patties. Dip patties in flour, salt, and pepper mixture then in egg-milk mixture. Place each patty gently in crumbs and grated cheese.

Melt butter in skillet and brown the patties slightly. Place patties in baking dish. Cover with half the tomato soup. Place one slice of cheese on each. Add water to remaining soup and pour in baking dish. Bake at 325° for 30 minutes.

SKILLET LASAGNA

1 16-ounce box of ziti noodles
1 32-ounce jar of spaghetti sauce
1 pint of heavy cream
1 pound of hamburger
¼ cup of chopped onion
1 jar of beef gravy
8 ounces of mozzarella cheese
1 teaspoon Italian seasoning
¼ cup grated parmesan cheese

In frying pan cook hamburger, sauted onion, and Italian seasoning. When hamburger is browned, add spaghetti sauce, gravy, and heavy cream. Cook for approximately 10 minutes. Add parmesan cheese. Cook for additional 5 minutes.

Pour mixture over cooked noodles in a 9×13-inch pan. Place in oven for 30 minutes. Sprinkle mozzarella cheese on top return to oven and heat until cheese is melted. Serve with garlic bread.

SPAGHETTI PIE

3 cups cooked spaghetti (approximately 6 ounces)
2 tablespoons butter
⅓ cup parmesan cheese
2 eggs, well beaten
1 cup cottage cheese
¼ cup chopped green pepper
2 cup spaghetti sauce
1 pound ground beef
½ cup chopped onion
½ cup mozzarella cheese

Combine first set of ingredients and form a crust in a 10-inch buttered pie plate. Then layer cottage cheese over bottom of spaghetti crust.

Cook ground beef, green peppers, and onion until tender. Drain. Add spaghetti sauce and heat. Pour over spaghetti crust and bake at 350° for 20 minutes.

Sprinkle with mozzarella cheese and continue baking until cheese melts, approximately 5 minutes. Makes 4-6 servings.

Corned Beef & Cabbage for St. Patty's Day tastes delicious and it's easy enough for a weeknight when the corned beef brisket is prepared in the slow cooker.

Featured Recipe

Even though St. Patty's Day is on a busy Monday this year, don't let that keep you from preparing a traditional feast of corned beef and cabbage. Corned beef brisket is a perfect menu choice for the slow cooker, and the slow cooker is the perfect cooking choice for busy cooks. Just put the corned beef in the cooker with seasonings, onions, and celery and cook — no attention needed!

Whether you're using the slow cooker or cooking the corned beef on the stovetop, the secret to success is simple. Don't try to speed up the cooking. Brisket needs long, slow cooking to result in perfect fork-tender beef. Another must — don't peek during cooking. Every time the lid is lifted, steam escapes, adding extra cooking time.

CORNED BEEF & CABBAGE WITH RED CURRANT MUSTARD SAUCE

2½ to 3 pound boneless corned beef brisket
3 ribs celery, cut into 3-inch lengths
2 medium onions, cut lengthwise into quarters
3½ cups water
1 pound green cabbage, cut into 3-inch wedges
1 pound red potatoes, cut into 2-inch pieces
6 to 8 small carrots, tops trimmed or 4 medium carrots, cut crosswise into thirds
½ cup water
2 tablespoons butter, melted
salt and pepper
Red Currant-Mustard Sauce (recipe follows)
chopped parsley (optional)

Place celery and onions in 4½ to 5½-quart slow cooker; top with corned beef brisket. Add corned beef seasoning packet, if included, and 3½ cups water. Cover and cook on HIGH 7 hours, or on LOW 9 to 10 hours, or until brisket is fork-tender. Remove brisket; set aside. Discard cooking liquid and solids.

Place cabbage, potatoes, and carrots in 2½-quart microwave-safe casserole; add ½ cup water. Cover and microwave on HIGH 15 minutes, or until vegetables are tender, stirring once. Drain vegetables; add butter and salt and pepper, as desired; toss to coat.

Carve brisket diagonally across the grain into thin slices. Serve with vegetables and Red Currant-Mustard Sauce. Garnish with chopped parsley, if desired.

Makes 6 to 8 servings.

Cook's Tip: If corned beef does not come with seasoning packet, substitute 1 teaspoon whole black peppercorns and 1 bay leaf.

Variation: To cook on stovetop, bring corned beef, seasoning, onions, celery, and water to boil. Reduce heat and simmer until fork-tender, about 2½ to 3½ hours. Prepare vegetables as directed above.

RED CURRENT-MUSTARD SAUCE

1 jar (12 ounces) red currant jelly
3 tablespoons coarse grain Dijon-style mustard

Place jelly in medium microwave-safe bowl. Cover and microwave on HIGH 1½ to 2 minutes or until smooth, stirring once. Wisk in mustard. Cover and microwave on HIGH 30 seconds.

Makes about 1¼ cups.

Leftover Corned Beef? Lucky You!

"The luck of the Irish is with you if you have leftover corned beef," says Sara Reddington, director of the Beef and Veal Culinary Center of the National Cattlemen's Beef Association.

Here she shares some of her favorite ways to enjoy the leftovers. The Reuben Sandwich — the grilled classic with sauerkraut, Thousand Island dressing, and Swiss on rye bread — is hard to beat, but these ideas are also winners.

Reuben Quesadilla — Layer thinly sliced corned beef, drained sauerkraut, a drizzle of Thousand Island dressing and shredded Swiss cheese on a large flour tortilla. Top with second tortilla. Cook in heated nonstick skillet over medium heat until first side is lightly browned. Carefully turn and to brown other side and melt cheese. Cut into wedges.

Corned Beef-Wich with Horseradish Slaw — Layer thinly sliced corned beef on dark rye or pumpernickel bread and top with a mixture of packaged "sliced" coleslaw mix, thin red bell pepper strips and prepared vinaigrette accented with prepared horseradish. Close sandwich.

Corned Beef with Chutney Cheese Sandwich — Layer thinly sliced corned beef on bottom of rye or multi-grain sandwich roll that is spread with a mixture of prepared chutney, Dijon-style mustard, sliced green onion, and softened cream cheese. Add lettuce leaf. Close sandwich.

Traditional Hash In-A-Flash — Saute chopped onion and bell pepper in small amount of butter over medium heat in large skillet. Add corned beef cut into ½-inch pieces and packaged cooked diced potatoes. Press mixture firmly in skillet. Cook, turning with spatula several times, until browned and cooked through.

Corned Beef & Potato Salad — Toss thinly sliced corned beef with cooked potato wedges, thinly sliced green onion and prepared Dijon-style vinaigrette. Serve atop a bed of packaged mixed greens.

White Spots On Your Collar?

LEESPORT (Berks Co.) — Mysterious white speckled spots on the front and collars of your clothes maybe caused by the spray of whitening toothpaste. The degree of discoloration will be determined by the dyes in the fabric, as well as the fibers used in the fabric.

Brush your teeth before getting dressed and wash your hands to remove traces of the toothpaste to minimize the opportunity for contact with fabrics.

Calendar Helps Get Finances On Track

HONESDALE (Wayne Co.) — Have you ever suddenly realized that your bank CD matured yesterday or that you forgot to send in your car insurance premium?

You can avoid these ugly surprises by using a spending calendar, said Debra Bryant, CFP and Penn State Cooperative Extension Agent in Wayne County. Penn State Cooperative Extension has a free monthly spending plan calendar you can use to record these and other important financial dates.

When you get the calendar simply write the dates in the squares to match the dates of the month, or you can use any calendar you have on hand. Then in red ink record the names of any fixed expenses (these are bills that stay the same month after month, like your rent or car payment) and the amount on their due dates. Don't forget to record bills that you don't necessarily pay every month. For example, Bryant says she pays her car insurance only every six months, so the car insurance bill shows up only on her January and July monthly spending plans.

Then, using a green pen write down the amount and dates of all the money you have coming in each month. For example, if you get paid $400 each Friday, you would write $400 in each Friday box on the calendar. Be sure to include all money you have coming in each month. Don't forget things like food stamps, child support, etc.

Next using a pencil record the due dates and amounts of bills that can vary from month to month (flexible expenses). One of these expenses is probably food, another could be clothing or medical expenses.

As you review your overall financial picture, you may find that too many large payments are clustered in some months. In some cases, your insurance company or creditors may be willing to reschedule some of your payments to other dates so that you match your income and expenses better. Or, keep existing payment dates but rework your monthly spending plan and set aside adequate amounts weekly for future quarterly or other periodic payments. For example, if you know you will have a $600 car insurance bill in 6 months, set aside $100 each month or $25 from each weekly paycheck. Then when the bill comes due you'll have the money you need.

A financial calendar is not a complete substitute for effective cash flow and expenditure records. However, if you are unable to stick with using a home account book or financial software, consider keeping a financial calendar which usually is more familiar and less intimidating. The financial calendar can be a starting point for developing more detailed financial records and projections, or it can supplement your current financial system. A financial calendar that can be started in any month is available from Penn State University Cooperative Extension Office in Wayne County. We're at the Wayne County Courthouse, 925 Court Street, Honesdale, PA 18431.

Science-Based Independent Report Confirms Beef's Important Dietary Role

DENVER, Colo. — A special report from the American Council on Science and Health (ACSH) has provided an independent, up-close and science-based look at how beef fits in the diets of U.S. consumers.

"The Role of Beef in the American Diet" explores key nutrition and safety issues as they relate to the value of including beef in the diet.

Written by Kathleen Meister, M.A., under the coordination of Ruth Kava, Ph.D., R.D., ACSH director of nutrition, the 48-page report was reviewed by 14 authorities with expertise in many different disciplines.

Issues addressed include a nutrition overview in terms of minerals, other nutrients and fats; meat intake and its relationship to diseases; hormones and antibiotics; microbiological safety issues, such as E. coli O157:H7, Salmonella and Listeria; irradiation; and contemporary issues such as BSE and Foot and Mouth Disease.

Among the report's findings is that beef is a wholesome, safe food that makes nutritious contributions to the American diet. "It is particularly valuable as a source of zinc, iron, and other minerals; B vitamins and choline; and protein."

It states that lean beef in moderate servings fits into heart-healthy diets, and that nearly two-thirds of the fat in beef is composed of fatty acids that do not raise cholesterol levels.

"It's encouraging to see a review of the scientific literature by a nationally known scientific group that confirms the positive role beef plays in the American diet," according to Wade Zimmerman, a beef producer from Sugar City, Colo, and chairman of the industry's Joint Nutrition and Health Committee.

Zimmerman, who is a member of the Cattlemen's Beef Board, says U.S. beef producers, through their $1-per-head beef checkoff, "have for years worked to get factual information about beef to consumers. This report validates those efforts and supports the use of sound science as an approach to good nutrition and diet management."

For information about the report and membership in the American Council on Science and Health, write to ACSH, 1995 Broadway, Second Floor, New York, NY, 10023-5860. Copies of the report are $5 for non-members, $2.50 for ACSH members.

QUESTION — J. Howdyshell, Bridgewater, Va., would like to know how to preserve honey. She was given some honey on the comb and would like to preserve it for future use.

QUESTION — David Manilla, Worcester, and his family have enjoyed road side and fire house chicken barbecues. He would like the recipe for the spray that is applied at several intervals in cooking. This spray, he says, appears to be a combination of cider vinegar, Worcestershire and soy sauce, butter or margarine, and an assortment of seasonings. There is also a variety of seasoned rubs that may or may not be applied in conjunction with this spray. He is interested in a non-commercial rub that is not over powering.

QUESTION — A reader would like a recipe for McKinley Pie and any history on the pie.

QUESTION — Nancy Wallace, New Holland, is looking for a place in Lancaster County that she can purchase fresh coconut that is already grated. She needs it to make Easter eggs and fresh coconut cake for Easter. Years ago, she writes, it could be purchased at farmers markets.

QUESTION — Peggy Thoman, Hanover, writes that her church is planning for the first time a pancake breakfast for Easter morning. She would appreciate recipes for various syrups other than the traditional syrups — particularly fruit syrups.

QUESTION — Peggy Wilson, while reading a 1911 Inglenook Cookbook, found recipes calling for Graham flour. In the miscellaneous section of the book she found that Graham flour was listed as 20 pounds wheat flour, five pounds bran, and 2½ pounds short. Peggy would like to know what "shorts" are. In the same book she found recipes were mixed in a double boiler with boiling water underneath, then put in a fireless cooker. She would like to know what a fireless cooker is. Another utensil that was used to bake breads was called a Gem pan, and she was wondering what a Gem pan was.

QUESTION — Eileen Schuler, Fleetwood, asks where chocolate confectioners' sugar can be found. The ingredient was listed in the prize-winning recipe for the Greatest Cocoa Cake contest at the Pennsylvania Farm Show. Several other readers also inquired about this. We asked the person who baked the prize winning cake. She said it can be purchased at Weis Markets in the Adams County area. However, several people who looked for it in other areas, said that Weis did not carry chocolate confectioners sugar. No problem, according to the champion, Krista Cunningham. She said, "Make your own." She adds about ½ cup baking cocoa powder to a pound of regular confectioners' sugar or more to taste. If any of our readers know where chocolate confectioners' sugar can be purchased, let us know.

QUESTION — Helen Ross, Coatesville, wants the recipe for the starter to make Amish friendship bread. She has the recipe for the bread.

QUESTION — Richard Deckner, Quakertown, wants a recipe for a dropped Welsh cookie.

QUESTION — Joyce Shoemaker wants a recipe to make old-fashioned caramel custard. She remembers the butter and sugar is caramelized until it is hard like taffy. Milk is poured in to dissolve the caramelized sugar. Then the custard is boiled with some other ingredients until thickened.

QUESTION — Doris Myers, Hughesville, writes that her mother, who is 88 years old, lost her mother at a young age. She remembers her mother baking bread and reserving some of the liquid to bake a chocolate cake. Doris would like to surprise her mother by baking a cake like that if someone can send in the recipe. The cake was baked the same day as the bread.

QUESTION — T.C. Wills, Frederick, writes that her mother made a cheese pineapple pocket during the Easter season. The dough was neither like a pie crust nor a pastry dough. It was sort of a solid dough. Wills has tried to duplicate the filling and the dough but cannot. She thinks it may be a Polish dessert, and would appreciate a recipe.

QUESTION — R. Diehl, Bloomsburg, wants a recipe for hamburg pin wheel with gravy.

QUESTION — Shirley Schwoerer, Wysox, wants to know if sesame seeds can be sprouted. She is familiar with alfalfa seed sprouting.

QUESTION — Ralph Kieffer, Halifax, wants a recipe for Aunt Flossie's tomato soup, which he heard is printed in a Lancaster County cookbook.

ANSWER — For the reader who requested low-fat recipes and diabetic recipes that other readers have tried and liked, Irene Horning, Mifflinburg, sent in the following recipes.

Pumpkin Creme

2 cups cold skim milk
2 packs sugar-free instant pudding
1 cup canned pumpkin
1 teaspoon pumpkin pie spice
1 cup whipped topping

Mix all ingredients together and beat for one minute. Makes eight servings.

No-Fat Bread

2 egg whites
1 tablespoon yeast
2½ cups warm water
⅓ cup sugar
1¼ teaspoon salt
Five cups flour

Beat egg whites in a large bowl until foamy. In another dish add yeast to warm water. Add this yeast mixture, along with sugar, salt, and flour — enough to make a sticky dough. Knead on a floured board until smooth. Let set in a large bowl about one hour. Divide into three loaves and put in a pan. Let sit about one hour. Bake at 350 degrees 35-30 minutes. Calories per slice: 90.

Low-Fat Cherry Angel Dessert

14-ounce can low-fat sweetened condensed milk
1 cup cold water
1 package sugar-free instant vanilla pudding mix
8-ounce carton plain fat-free yogurt
16-ounce container light whipped dessert topping
1 baked angel food cake, cubed
20-ounce can reduced-calorie cherry pie filling.

In a bowl combine sweetened condensed milk, water, and pudding mix. Beat until well combined. Chill for 15 minutes. Fold in the yogurt and dessert topping. In a three-quart baking dish, layer half of the pudding mixture. Place all of the cake on top. Top with cherry pie filing, then the remaining pudding mixture cover and chill before serving.

Sugar Free Strawberry Pie

1 small box sugar-free strawberry gelatin
1 small box sugar-free cooked vanilla pudding
1 teaspoon lemon juice
2 cups water
1½ cups fat-free whipped topping
1 cup strawberries
Reduced-fat graham cracker pie crust.

Mix first four ingredients together in a saucepan. Bring to a boil. Let cool. Add whipped topping and strawberries. Mix together. Pour into crust. Refrigerate. Serves 8.

J. Howdyshell, Bridgewater, Va., sent in the following recipe.

Soft Chicken Tortillas

1 pound boneless, skinless chicken breasts, cut into cubes
15-ounce can black beans, rinsed and drained
1 cup salsa
1 tablespoon taco seasoning
6 (8-inch) flour tortillas, warmed
Optional toppings: shredded lettuce, shredded cheese, diced tomatoes, sour cream

In a skillet that has been coated with nonstick cooking spray, cook chicken until juices run clear. Add beans, salsa, and taco seasoning; heat through. Spoon chicken mixture down the center of each tortilla. Garnish with toppings of your choice — fold or roll up. One taco: 271 calories, 2 grams fat, 23 grams protein.

ANSWER — A. Shull writes that she tried two different recipes to make pull taffy recently and was unsuccessful. One batch, before it was cool enough to start pulling became extremely brittle. She thought perhaps she overcooked it and tried a second batch, which turned white and chalky as it cooled. Glenna Eisentrout, Bruceton Mills, W. Va., sent in her own recipe and taffy pull procedure.

Pull Taffy

1 cup sugar
½ cup water
⅔ cup white corn syrup
½ teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons butter

Combine all ingredients in a saucepan Cook to 248 degrees. Remove and add flavor and color. Pour onto a greased cookie sheet until cool enough to handle. Shape into a ball and let flatten naturally. Wrap in plastic wrap and store at room temperature overnight. Put on a cookie sheet and heat for six minutes at 300 degrees. Put butter on hands and be ready to pull.

ANSWER — Lynne Numidia, wanted a recipe for pickled mustard eggs that tastes like those sold at the State Farm Show. Thanks to a reader who sent in the following recipe.

Pickled Mustard Eggs

10-12 hard boiled eggs
3 tablespoons mustard
1 cup water
⅔ cup sugar
½ cup vinegar
Pinch salt

Mix all ingredients together except eggs and heat until warm. Add eggs and store in refrigerator for a day or so to develop the flavor. A blender or hand mixer makes the mustard mixture smoother.

ANSWER — Albert Condon, New Windsor, Md., wrote to ask for a recipe for old-time fashioned ginger cookie cakes. Thanks for Fawn Bartleson, Martins Creek, for sending her recipe.

Molasses Cookies

1 cup butter, room temperature
1⅓ cup sugar
1 egg
⅓ cup molasses
3 tablespoons dark corn syrup
2 tablespoons milk
4 cups flour
2 teaspoons baking soda
2 teaspoons cinnamon
1½ teaspoon ground ginger
1½ teaspoon ground cloves.

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. in a large bowl, beat together butter, sugar, and egg until light and fluffy. Beat in molasses, corn syrup, and milk. Add dry ingredients and beat in until well blended. Shape dough into 1½-inch balls. Roll in sugar and place on ungreased cookie sheets three inches apart. Bake 12-14 minutes until golden. Do not overbake or they will not be soft. Cool 1-2 minutes on sheet, then remove to racks to completely cool. Makes 40 cookies.

Sarah Keeny, York, sent in the following recipe. Keeny writes that when she was a teenager in the 40s and 50s she used to assist her mother in baking these cookies for market.

Old Fashioned Ginger Cakes

1½ cups Brer Rabbit molasses, dark
1½ cup sour milk
4 eggs
1 teaspoon salt
¾ teaspoon ground cloves
2 teaspoons ginger
3 teaspoons baking soda
1½ teaspoons cinnamon
1½ cups very soft lard
1 tablespoon baking powder
All-purpose flour

Beat three eggs, add sugar. Beat until mixture is light in color. Add lard and beat thoroughly on slow speed. Dissolve baking soda in sour milk and add to mixture. Put spices and salt in ¼ cup hot water. Mix well, add to first mixture along with the molasses. Mix well. Add flour and baking powder, mixing well. Continue to add flour until batter is stiff enough to hold its shape when dropped from a spoon. Beat one egg in a small bowl. Using a spoon, dip into egg and then gently rub the tip of each cookie as it is dropped onto the cookie sheet. This will give a smooth shiny topping on each Bake at 375 degrees for about 15 minutes. Remove from pan onto rack to cool.

Additionally, Sharon Longenecker, Elizabethtown, sent in the following recipe. It is a favorite recipe of hers for dark molasses cakes handed down from her husband's Grandmother Garber.

Sugarless Molasses Cookies

1 quart baking molasses
¾ pint thick milk (sour milk or add one tablespoon vinegar per cup of milk)
¾ pint melted shortening
1 tablespoon baking soda
1 tablespoon cream of tartar
9 cups flour

Mix all ingredients and let set in refrigerator a few hours before baking. Bake at 375 degrees for 15 minutes. The recipe can easily be cut in half or the unbaked dough freezes well for baking at a later date. One teaspoon ginger could be added.

ANSWER — Bob Peterson, Hubbardsville, N.Y., wanted a recipe for Spanish Bar Cake. Thanks to a Chester County reader for sending in a recipe.

Spanish Bar Cake

4 cups water
2 cups raisins
1 cup shortening
4 cups all-purpose flour
2 cups granulated sugar
2 teaspoons baking soda
1 teaspoon ground cloves
1 teaspoon ground nutmeg
1 teaspoon ground cinnamon
½ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon ground allspice
2 eggs
1 cup chopped walnuts

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Lightly grease 9X13-inch pan. Cook raisins and water 10 minutes over medium heat. Stir in shortening. Remove from heat and let mixture cool. Combine dry ingredients. Add gradually to raisin mixture and blend well. Stir in beaten eggs. Add nuts (if desired). Pour mix into a prepared pan. Bake at 350 degrees for 35 minutes.

ANSWER — Michael Brennan, Wilkes-Barre, was looking for a good recipe for Manhattan clam chowder. Thanks to Johanna Kerman, Frenchtown, N.J., for sending in the following recipe.

Manhattan Clam Chowder

3 slices bacon, finely diced
1 quart boiling water
1½ teaspoon salt
1 cup finely diced carrots
1 cup finely diced celery
1 cup chopped onions
2 cups diced potatoes
1 cup canned tomatoes
¼ teaspoon pepper
½ teaspoon thyme
10 fresh or canned clams, finely chopped
Strained clam juice
1 tablespoon flour
1 tablespoon water

Fry bacon until golden but not brown; add water and simmer five minutes. Add salt and vegetables except potatoes; simmer 20 minutes. Add potatoes, tomatoes, pepper, and thyme. Cook 20 minutes. Add clams and juice; cook 10 minutes. Thicken with flour and water paste.

J. Howdyshell, Bridgewater, Va., sent in the following recipe.

Manhattan Clam Chowder

3 celery ribs, chopped
1 onion, chopped
1 can (14½-ounce) sliced potatoes, drained
1 can (14½-ounce) sliced carrots, drained
2 cans (6½-ounce) chopped clams
2 cups tomato juice
1½ cups water
½ cup tomato puree
1 tablespoon dried parsley flakes
1½ teaspoons dried thyme
1 teaspoon salt, optional
1 bay leaf
2 whole black peppercorns

In a slow cooker, combine all ingredients; stir. Cover and cook on low for 8 to 10 hours or until the vegetables are tender. Remove bay leaf and peppercorns before serving. Yields 9 servings. 1-cup serving: 123 cal., 1 g. fat, 12 g. protein.

Apply For Dairy Of Distinction Award By April 15

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co) — Pennsylvania dairy farms are invited to apply for this year's Dairy of Distinction award from the Northeast Dairy Farm Beautification Program Applications must be submitted by April 15

The award is based on the idea that attractive farmsteads enhance consumer confidence in the wholesomeness of milk and stimulate milk sales and public support for the industry Dairies receiving the highest scores in each of 10 Pennsylvania districts will be awarded an 18- by 24-inch Dairy of Distinction sign to display in front of their farm

"This program is run by volunteers and recognizes the hard work and dedication of dairy producers who promote a positive image for the dairy industry," said Mike O'Connor, secretary of the Pennsylvania Dairy of Distinction program and professor of dairy science extension in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences

Roadside judging will take place in May. Judges will look at factors that can be controlled by the farmer, such as clean and attractively finished buildings; neat landscaping, ditches, roads and lanes; and well-maintained fences. They also will take into account other aspects of the farm, such as cleanliness of animals,the barnyard, feed areas and manure management.

Winning farms will be notified in late June. Because this is a yearly award, previous winners are reevaluated each year to see if they are still maintaining excellent standards.

To receive an application, call Mike O'Connor at (814) 863-3913 or e-mail him at HYPERLINKmail to· MOConnor@psu edu.

Since 1987, Pennsylvania's Dairy of Distinction Program has recognized more than 700 dairy farms The Pennsylvania program is part of the Northeast Dairy Farm Beautification Program, which also includes New York, New Jersey, and Vermont. Dairies in these states can contact the program secretary in their state for applications.

HOW IS YOUR FARM SCORED?

Awards will be based upon neatness, good maintenance, and other factors, which can be controlled by the farmer Attractive background scenery should not be weighed heavily in judging All judging observations should be made from a vehicle at one or more points on an adjacent public highway (or if farm is off the road, the nearest lane) Judging should give equal consideration to old wood construction and new construction of metal or concrete block

The award program may be used for subsequent advertising or promotion activities for dairy products or dairy farming Farmers who apply for awards agree that, if selected, they will cooperate with these activities and make all reasonable efforts to maintain both the exterior and interior of their properties in an acceptable condition

HOW THE JUDGING WORKS

Judging teams will visit the farms during the month of May Farms will be judged each year as the award is presented on an annual basis Any dairy failing to maintain appearance standards will be asked to remove their sign The Dairy of Distinction signs remain the property of the committee, not the property of the dairy farmer All farms must achieve a compliance score of 90 percent on their Dairy of Distinction score card Your cooperative or milk handler will be contacted to approve your milk quality

RULES FOR THE DAIRY OF DISTINCTION AWARD

1 The Dairy of Distinction sign remains the property of the Northeast Dairy Farm Beautification Program Committee (NEDFBP)

2 The post and bracket shall be supplied by and maintained by the dairy farmer NEDFBP suggests that a wood post 4" x 4" x 12' or iron pipe 2" x 12' be used Posts or pipe should be installed and maintained in true vertical position with 8' above ground Top of the bracket should be lower than six inches from the top of the post In addition, NEDFBP suggests that the sign be mounted in a frame to provide additional stability

3 The sign shall be displayed in front of the dairy at roadside An attractive post and bracket, or other frame shall be used to display the sign No more than three signs should be displayed from the sign frame or post, and all shall be of a style, general size and quality comparable to the Dairy of Distinction sign The sign should be secured on all sides to avoid wind damage

4 Signs shall not be moved to other premises New owners of a Dairy of Distinction farm must apply to retain the sign

5 Replacement of damaged signs shall be at the discretion of the committee

6 No producer shall be charged with scoring or sign expenses

7 The judges' decision will be final

8 Judging will take place between May 1 and May 31

9 Farms awarded a Dairy of Distinction sign in previous years will be judged between April 1 and April 30 If they do not qualify, they will be rejudged between May 1 and May 31 so they have the opportunity to keep the sign

10 Farms that do not requality will return the sign to their regional Dairy of Distinction Committee

Dairy of Distinction
2003 Pennsylvania Application

PURPOSE OF PROGRAM

Attractive dairy farms give the consumer greater confidence in the wholesomeness of milk and stimulate milk sales which encourages public support of the dairy industry. The award gives recognition to the dairy farmer for maintaining a well-kept farmstead.

ELIGIBILITY

All Northeast dairy farms producing milk for sale are invited to submit an application for the award. Dairies receiving the 10 highest scores in each of the 21 districts will receive an 18" x 24" Dairy of Distinction sign to be displayed in front of their farm.

St. Patrick's Day

On March 17, many people dress in green and have parties. Why? Because it's St. Patrick's Day, a celebration of an Irish saint. St Patrick was born around 389 A D., and he worked hard to strengthen the Christian Church in Ireland His feast day is on March 17.

On St Patrick's Day, many people celebrate by wearing green This is because another name for Ireland is "The Emerald Isle." Shamrocks are a green plant that's associated with Ireland, so many people wear shamrocks or pictures of them They may also eat special foods like corned beef and potatoes. Some grownups drink Irish beer Many people sing songs or dance. Some cities have parades, too

How will you celebrate St Patrick's Day? Will you wear green?

Johann Sebastian Bach

Johann Sebastian Bach was one of the greatest composers in history. He was born on March 21, 1685, in Germany. He created many musical works both for church and for everyday. His church music is still used in some churches.

Bach was born into a family of musicians His parents died when he was nine years old. He then went to live with his brother, an organist, and learned to play and write his own music In 1703, at the age of about 18, Bach accepted a job in an orchestra Six months later, he became a church organist. Bach held a variety of jobs in churches throughout his life. He was difficult to work with, and in one case, he angered the church people he worked for so much that they threw him in jail for a month!

Bach was married twice and had 20 children! Several of his sons also became well-known composers Bach died in Leipzig, Germany, on July 28, 1750

Spring Equinox

What does the word "equinox" look like to you? If you think "equinox" looks like the word "equal," then you have a good idea of what it means. An equinox happens when day and night are exactly the same length of time. In winter, the days are shorter, and in summer, the days are long and the nights are shorter Between summer and winter, there are two times when days and nights are exactly the same length

There will be an equinox this month on March 20 And what does that mean? It means that spring is here!

Traditionally, the equinoxes mark the start of a new season—the one in March marks the beginning of spring, and the one in September marks the beginning of autumn.

Colorful, Flexible, Silicone Bakeware Available

LEESPORT (Berks Co.) — New bakeware in colors of red, yellow, blue, and purple that can be squashed into a cluttered cabinet for storage, yet always returns to its proper shape, is attractive and easy to use. This bakeware, available in all shapes and sizes, is made of FDA approved food-grade silicone. It feels rubbery, is bendable, and appears to be structurally unstable, but withstands continual use.

The high gloss of silicone makes this bakeware inherently non-stick, allows quick release of baked goods, which encourages low-fat baking. However, if a recipe includes pan preparation of greasing and flouring, it should be followed. Silicone provides freezer to oven temperature use, with excellent heat distribution for even baking and quick cool down for easy handling. It can be used for molded ice cream desserts, oven baked goods, and is also serviceable in the microwave. It will not retain odors or flavors, is easy to clean, and dishwasher safe. Most silicone bakeware requires it be used on a sturdy baking sheet, however some brands have built in structural feet for stability, other brands come with a metal rack. Silicone bakeware items cost between $10-$20.

You'll also find colorful silicone utensils; especially spatulas in many shapes and sizes.

York County Searches For Dairy Princess Court

YORK (York Co.) — Young women between the ages of 16 and 24 are needed to serve as the York County dairy princess. All applicants may either live or work on a dairy farm, own two dairy animals, or be related to someone in the dairy industry and must have a sincere interest in promoting the dairy industry. Anyone who is of dairy princess age may serve as a dairy ambassador on the court.

Girls between the ages of 12-15 may serve on the court as dairy maids. Dairy Miss and Little Dairy Miss contestants must be between the ages of 5 and 11.

Dairy Princess and Dairy Ambassador contestants are required to give a speech and present a skit at the coronation. Dairy maids are required to prepare and present an informational poster. Dairy Miss and Little Dairy Miss contestants must prepare and present an original poem.

Being on the York County Dairy Princess Court provides an opportunity for tremendous personal growth and a chance to meet many new people. All contestants must be present at the coronation scheduled May 14 to receive a sash and crown.

An informational tea will be held on April 6 at the home of the current dairy princess, Rachael Kilgore. For more information, contact Lori Baumgardner at (717) 432-3169 or Heather Crowl at (717) 862-3955.

Ida's Notebook

Ida Risser

The middle of March and often I would have my sugar peas planted by this time. But, this year I live here alone waiting for my husband to come home from his weeks in the hospital. I'm certainly glad that I have a braided rug to keep me busy.

I've been reading my 1966 diary when all of our six children were at home. Our oldest was a senior in high school and our youngest was two years old. We were amazed that she could read at that age when many children are only learning to talk.

It almost makes me tired to simply sit and read of the many activities our children participated in at that time. One was in a play at school and one was in the orchestra. Another tutored several students all over the county. The older ones regularly babysat for neighbors. And, I was chauffeur for a carload of kindergartners. They had to be hauled to and from school, which was quite a chore.

At this time in March 1966, my husband was spending all his days helping his father prepare for a farm sale instead of working at home. Even our oldest boys were expected to help prepare the cows and machinery for sale. On top of all this activity there were evening meetings to attend.

Through all of this bustle we managed to eat together. All of our children learned to cook and bake as they certainly liked to eat. They all had chores at the barn too. It was at this time that a big heifer pulled our son along the ground and he had to get 10 stitches in his head and forfeit a wrestling championship at school.

Sometimes I am amazed at all of the things that we as parents lived through. And now, our children are doing the same with their children.

LOST STREAM MAP

The "Stream Map of Pennsylvania" was completed in 1965 after a 30 year effort by Howard Higbee, a former Penn State Professor

Professor Higbee succeeded in creating a map of the highest detail possible a map that shows every stream and lake He painstakingly plotted by hand, the location of 45,000 miles of streams onto a 3 by 5 foot map

The map sold extremely well - until it was lost several years later Incredibly, the printer entrusted with the original drawing and printing plates declared bankruptcy, then carelessly hauled Higbee's 30 years of work to the landfill

The few remaining dog-eared copies became a prized fisherman's possession. Professor Higbee was offered $400 for one of his last maps And state agencies were forced to keep their copies under lock and key

The experts had always told Professor Higbee that reprints were impossible, because the maps were printed in non-photographic blue

Then, in 1991, at the age of 91, Howard Higbee's dream came true Computers made it possible to reprint the map Holding an updated map, Howard said, "I never thought I'd live to see this day "

Then, by combining Professor Higbee's knowledge with computer technology -- the STREAM MAP OF OHIO was created

Berlin FFA Members Honor School Superintendent

SANDRA LEPLEY
Somerset Co. Correspondent

BERLIN (Somerset Co.) — The Berlin Brothersvalley FFA Chapter members recently honored the school superintendent, Wayne C. Henderson, during the 64th annual parent/member banquet at the Berlin Community Center.

Henderson received the 48th Honorary FFA Chapter Degree as the honorary chapter member.

The longtime educator who resides in Bedford County has a 34-year career in education. He began working as superintendent at Berlin in 1999 and has been supportive of the agricultural program ever since. At home his hobbies include woodworking and managing sheep.

Michael Clark, FFA adviser told the 200 people in attendance, "Mr. Henderson brings much enthusiasm and sincerity to our agricultural educational program and to our FFA organization by assisting in the ongoing efforts to develop the program through satisfying many needs."

Recognitions

A special thank you went out to agricultural aide, Roxann Leydig; FFA photographer and video technician; Sam Brick; previous agricultural teacher and wife, Doyle and Donna Paul; and previous agricultural teacher, Everett Nicklow.

The fourth-place State FFA safety demonstration team presented their demonstration entitled "Better Safe than Sorry."

Awards

Numerous awards were given to members. Here is a partial listing: The Chapter Sweetheart Award went to Jenna Hillegass, daughter of Jeff and Nancy Hillegass.

Dekalb Award - Luke Horning, chapter president.

Highest GPA - Jared Hillegass, chapter vice president.

The American Degrees: Justin Hillegass, Jason VanGilder and Lance Bittner, who received his degree at the National FFA Convention.

W.J. Brant presented the corn growing contest awards from Chemgro: 1. Jared Hillegass, 227 bushels; 2. Jarred Fox, 212 bushels; 3. Russell Webreck 200 bushels.

A special parents Recognition was bestowed by Jared Hillegass to his parents, Doug and Debbie Hillegass, Glades Pike, Berlin. His parents received the Honorary Keystone Degree at State Mid-Winter Convention and the local chapter recognized them for having three children earn state degrees — Desirae in 1998, Justin in 1999, and Jared in 2003.

The FFA Demonstration Team Gold Medals (4th in State Farm Safety Demonstration and in State over-all competition) included Kyle Hillegas, Luke Horning, Blake Weigle, and Sam Weimer.

Gold Medals to the FFA Farm Safety and Health Quiz Bowl Team - Kevin Bittner, Jarred Fox, Greg Frazier, and Russell Webreck.

The Star Discover Greenhand, and Chapter Farmer Awards were given to the top individuals who have excelled above and beyond the average individual in their degree category.

The Chapter FFA Degree to FFA went to members who have satisfactorily completed at least 180 hours of systematic school instruction in agricultural education. Students must have earned, by their own efforts from their supervised agricultural experience program, and deposited in a bank or otherwise productively invested at least $150 or worked 45 hours in the supervised agricultural experience program. They include Sam Brick, Dave Chonko, Shane Hankinson, Becky Hay, Shawn Martin, Melissa Slifco, and Russell Webreck.

West Snyder FFA Collects Food For Ronald McDonald House

BEAVER SPRINGS (Snyder Co.) — The West Snyder FFA Chapter exceeded their goal to collect 2,000 food items by gathering 2,567 food items valued at over $800 to benefit the Ronald McDonald house of Danville.

Mr. Griffith, West Snyder principal, contributed to the success on the food drive when he volunteered to kiss a pig at a school assembly if the FFA Chapter met or exceeded their goal.

This was the largest food drive ever conducted by the West Snyder FFA Chapter. Previously, the largest food drive collected 1,167 items in 2001. The food drive was conducted for Jan. 28 through Feb. 6 in conjunction with the Snyder County Farm Bureau as part of the National Food Check-out Day program.

West Snyder FFA members placed cash collection cans and food collection boxes at local businesses and sponsored a school-wide food drive. In order to get the student body more involved, the chapter sponsored a pizza party for the class that collected the highest number of items. The classes were also awarded spirit points for their efforts. The junior class earned the pizza party and spirit points by collecting 1,109 food items. The sophomore class was second and the seniors placed third.

February 7 was designated as National Food Check-Out Day by the National Farm Bureau, a day established to emphasize the affordability of food in America. Statistics show that between Jan. 1 and Feb. 7, the average American family earns enough money to feed their family for the entire year. That figure even includes the added cost Americans spend eating in restaurants. In comparison, to pay local, state, and federal taxes, the same wage and salary earners must work until May 3, or 123 days.

The Pennsylvania Farm Bureau selected the donation toward the Ronald McDonald House, because it serves as a "home away from home" for families of children who are critically ill and are being treated at Geisinger Hospital.

Little Rascals 4-H Club Competes in State Convention

NAZARETH (Northampton Co.) — The Little Rascals Northampton County 4-H club participated in the Pennsylvania State Rabbit Breeders Show and Convention which took place at the Lebanon Valley Fairgrounds. 4-H members Lora Derbyshire, Sara Plokhooy, Kelsey Groff, and Kelsey Plokhooy competed in the event on February 1.

Northampton County 4-H member, Sara Plokhooy, placed first in the Rabbit Judging Contest, which was part of the Pennsylvania State Rabbit Breeders Convention. The contest was open to all ages.

Sara competed with six other youth in the 9-12 year old class. While judging, contestants look for a compact body with balancing depth and width, an animal which is very plump and full over and around the hips, an animal where the size of the head, ears and bones are in proportion to the rest of the body, and an animal which is full and meaty. Other characteristics to look for include; a well shaped, well-filled face and jaws which are set on a short neck, and an animal which carries their ears erect are well furred. Using these criteria, Sara did a wonderful job using decision making skills to place the animals.

4-H HAPPENINGS

Lancaster County 4-H Sheep Club Reorganizing

Youth who are interested in feeding market lambs or raising breeding sheep are invited to attend the reorganizational meeting of the Lancaster County 4-H Woolies Club at 7 p.m. on Monday, March 17 at the Lancaster Farm and Home Center, 1383 Arcadia Road, Lancaster.

Election of officers and distribution of project books will highlight the meeting activities.

To be eligible for membership in the club, members must be between the ages of 8 and 18 before January 1, 2003 regardless of race, color, national origin, sex, or handicap. They have the responsibility of caring for and feeding their own sheep and keeping records on their lambs. They also have the opportunity of showing their lambs at the 4-H Fair or at community farm shows.

For more information about the 4-H club program, contact the Penn State Cooperative Extension (717) 394-6851.

Conodoguinet 4-H Sheep Club

The Conodoguinet 4-H Sheep Club met on Feb. 20 at the extension office. President Austin Durf called the meeting to order. Jeanette Bouch led the members in the American pledge and Caleb Burkholder led the members in the 4-H pledge. The secretary and treasurer's report was approved as read.

A community service report was given. Ethel Myers reported to the club that we donated money to Warm the Children and Jeanette Bouch told of a Christmas program that she helped by donating a sheep.

New Members Katie Walker, Greg Crum, and Brian Nailor, were introduced to the club.

Under old business, a report was given on the 4-H achievement banquet, the livestock banquet, a Farm Show report, and the club members received their books back from last year.

Under new business, each club member had to fill out a medical form and a 4-H code of conduct. We also discussed on some program ideas and locations for the upcoming year.

The following officers were elected: president — Brian Nailor; vice president — Austin Durf; secretary — Katie McCorriston; assistant secretary — Katie Walker; treasurer — Jake Zeigler; news reporter — Jamie Gaughan; social chairperson — Chase Bough; and youth council representive — Cody Bough.

The next meeting will be on March 20, at 7:30 p.m. at the Newville Hardware and Feed. Anyone interested in joining the club can contact club leader Ethel Myers at (717) 258-3850 or Laura Watts at the Cumberland County extension office (717) 240-6500.

You ask ou answer

This column is for readers who have questions but don't know who to ask for answers.

"You Ask—You Answer" is for non-cooking questions. When a reader sends in a question, it will be printed in the paper. Readers who know the answer are asked to respond by mailing the answer, which will then be printed in the paper.

Questions and Answers to this column should be addressed to You Ask—You Answer, Lancaster Farming, P.O. Box 609, Ephrata, PA 17522. Attention: Lou Ann Good.

Or, you may e-mail questions and answers to LGOOD.EPH@LNPNEWS.COM

Please clarify what question you are answering when responding.

Do not send a self-addressed, stamped envelope for a reply. If we receive the answer, we will publish it as soon as possible. Please include your phone number because we sometimes need to contact the person to clarify details. We will not publish your phone number unless you request it. However, if your question requires someone to mail items to you, you must include your address or phone number for publishing.

Some are Naval Academy yearbooks from the 1920s-1930s. Admiral Faragut Academy yearbooks are from the 1930s-1940s, and many other older naval-related books make up part of his collection. Balthaser is interested in hearing how to determine the value of the books or who to contact for information. Call him at (717) 589-7253.

ANSWER Amos Beiler, Quarryville, wanted to know where to find back issues of the Reader's Digest's story he thinks was printed in 1988-1989 about five men who were adrift on the Pacific Ocean for several months and survived by eating fish. Thanks to Walter Durling for writing that articles can be ordered directly from Readers' Digest. Call 1-800-334-9599. When the voice-activated menu starts, loudly say, "Operator" to be connected to a live person who will take your order. Copies are $4 and can be paid by credit card.

ANSWER — Lydia Nolt wanted to know where to find old-fashioned red beet seeds. Thanks to Dave Hake for writing that Lydia is possibly referring to what is known as "Lutz' Greenleaf" or as the "Winterkeeper" red beets. If harvested about 55-60 days, it will produce a beet of normal size. If allowed to remain in the ground for about 80 days, and has been thinned to allow growth, it will produce a hugh red beet, which is still very tender, sweet, and dark red. The reader has a seed store in Winterstown called Hake's Farm and Seed. Call (717) 244-2754. A yearly seed catalog is printed with this variety listed along with many others. If Lydia would like a catalog, she should call and request one.

ANSWER — Tim Faber, Boonville, N.Y., wanted to find 10-point sockets with ½-inch drive mainly used for square bolts with small square inside a large square. Should fit square or hex made by Wright tools during the late 1950s-1960s. He needs 7⁄16, ½, 5⁄8, 7⁄8 or the whole set. Thanks to a subscriber for writing that sockets can be purchased from Roberts Supply, Bob Snyder, 1751 Woods Rd., Akron, Ohio 44306.

ANSWER — A reader wanted to know where to get a large bobsled to hitch to two horses. Thanks to James Cooper, 245 Prospect Rd., Delta, PA 17314 for writing that he has a large heavy-duty bobsled to hitch to two horses. He also have a few 10 gallon milk cans for readers who are interested.

ANSWER — B.D.H., Airville, wanted the city or town where several milk bottling plants were located. Thanks to Harriet Tinker for writing that both Western Maryland and Kress Dairy were in Baltimore, Md. The BCHD stands for Baltimore City Health Dept.

Letter Revives Memories Of 1936 St. Patrick's Day Flood

LINDA WILLIAMS
Bedford Co. Correspondent

My in-laws, John and Pearl Williams, both died in 1991. And, while I think of them often, I especially remember them on St. Patrick's Day and re-read the letter my mother-in-law wrote regarding the 1936 Johnstown flood.

BEDFORD (Bedford Co.) Most people think of the Johnstown flood as that occurring on May 31, 1889. To be certain, its devastation has never been equaled and the news it produced in the 19th century was equaled only by the assassination of Abraham Lincoln.

Many people still living remember the St. Patrick's Day flood of 1936. It was the year my parents were seniors in high school. My father often talked about how he got in trouble as he drove a carload of anxious youth from town to town looking at flood damage. They skipped school to do it!

Johnstown, however, was not one of the cities he visited. Residents of this city feared the worst...a repeat of the 1889 destruction.

My husband was a two-year-old toddler and his brother, a baby, on that fateful day.

Over the years, my mother-in-law's deep brown eyes would often cloud with tears as she remembered the fear she had experienced as she pushed her two little guys out the back door of their Johnstown home and up the hill to safety.

A month later, on Sunday, April 19, Pearl, my mother-in-law, sat down at her kitchen table to write a letter to her sister, Betty, in Cleveland, Ohio.

Her return address on the letterhead read simply, "Flood City".

Betty was pregnant with her first child and Pearl began the letter with misgivings over not being able to purchase some promised silk to make a robe for the upcoming hospital stay. She did however say she was sending a "teddy", a souvenir of the flood from Fosters' Store and was going to send her own silk nightie and jacket to wear for the occasion.

Continuing with family gossip, Pearl is pleased to share that brother, Andy, is buying a car for $10 a week, a 1934 Oldsmobile sedan. The purchasing price was a bargain, in 1936, for $500.

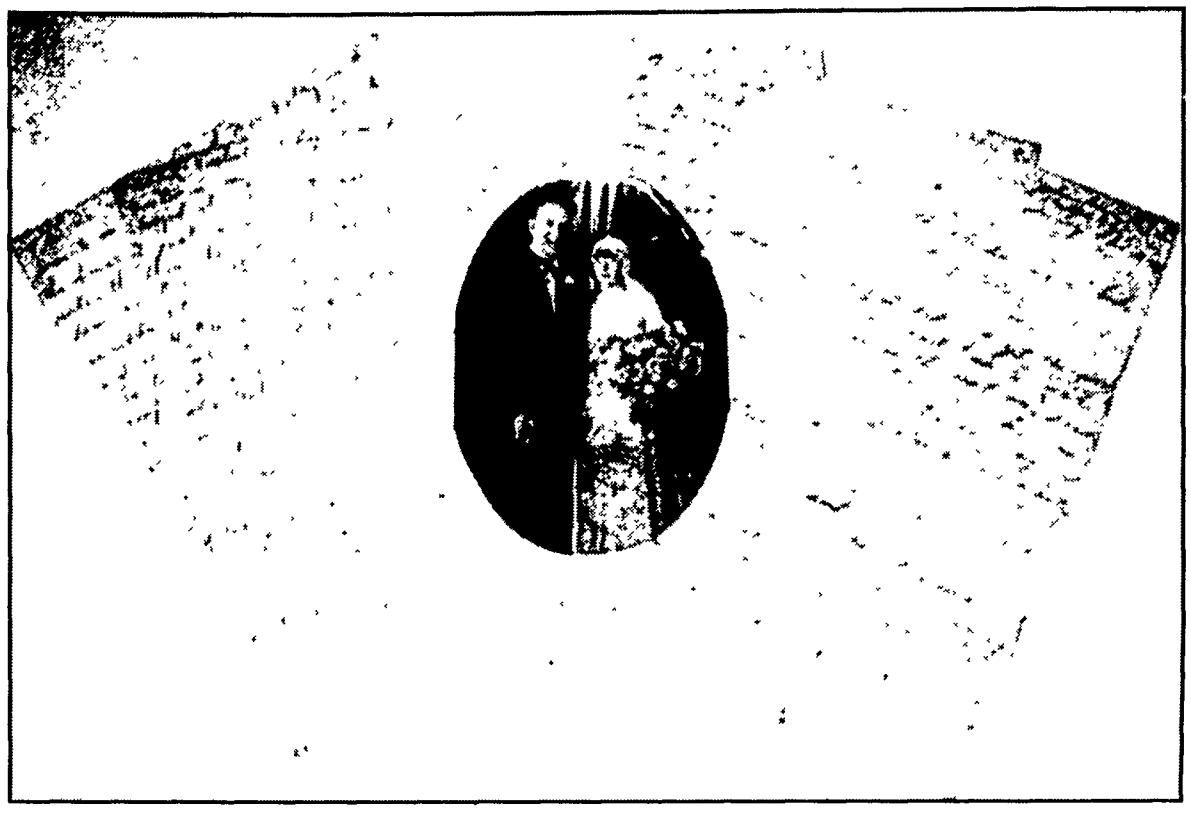
It's an ill wind that blows no one good and Pearl confirms this as she says that due to the flood, the Depression is over in Johnstown.

Schenkemeyers, my father-in-law's (Ned's) place of employment, had more work then they could handle, consequently, the workmen were getting time and a half for overtime and Sundays.

They wanted "Ned" to work on Easter but, tired of mud and cleanup, he preferred the company of his family.

"I have had my hands full cleaning up after the flood dirt," Pearl continued. Both of the children had been sick and one can only imagine the long days of working in the stench of flood waters. It was a smell my in-laws never forgot.

"I am so thankful for the little Hungarian girl in our neighborhood who helped me clean," Pearl related. "She worked like a trooper and I am all cleaned up except the attic and spare bedroom upstairs. And, was I glad for those spaces as we moved everything we could up there the day of the flood."



Letters are not valuable just because they are old. But families treasure finds such as this one because it is rich in family history. In this case, the letter details the experience of surviving the Johnstown Flood of 1936.

"I think I shall never forget it, it was an awful experience...."

"I was washing clothes. We had such terrible rains for two days and nights and so much snow on the ground all winter that still lay on the hills and the ground still frozen would not take any more water."

"Why the water just poured down them thar' hills!"

"I was half done with the clothes, when the people next door called to see if I had water in my cellar. I didn't. But I looked out onto the street as our cellar is level with the street and we have a door that leads to the sidewalk. I heard people saying the river was high and over its banks in some low places but I didn't think anything of it until around one o'clock.

"Dick Thiel, one of the sons of the old lady we rent from, dropped by and said he thought we were going to have high water like they had in 1906.

"Our cellar is immense and is divided into four rooms. Dick had stored some boxes of books in the smallest room and he wanted to move them to the attic. The rain continued to pour down and inch under the cellar door.

Once this task was completed, Dick and Pearl began lifting things to higher ground as the water was quickly filling the cellar. They moved Ned's motor saw and tools and emptied the washer and pulled it over to the steps. They grabbed baskets of clothes and work clothes and carried them to the upstairs bedrooms.

When the water had reached the motor on the washing machine, she and Dick began to lug it upstairs. It was so heavy that Pearl, who weighed no more then 120, almost let it fall on Dick.

Outside, the street was a like a river. A couple of boats drifted by in the rain.

By mid-afternoon, Pearl was concerned enough to call her family who lived nearby. But the line was dead the telephone office was already flooded. Pearl worried about her husband who had no way of contacting her. Finally, at 5 o'clock he arrived home.

Ned brought along a friend, Al. Dick had stayed and the three men sat at the kitchen table, already knee deep in water, to devour a pot of freshly made Hungarian goulash. They also drank a quart of liquor and a half gallon of wine which Pearl is certain braced them for the night's work ahead.

They carried rugs, all the clothes, drawers, radio, living room chairs, cushions from the couch, and dishes to the second floor. Propping the beds on chairs, they piled dressers on top of that and the davenport on top of that. Even the heavy Kelvinator refrigerator was lifted on top of the kitchen table. The motor got wet, but the insulation remained intact.

There was 53 inches of water in the house.

Putting her two little ones in a baby buggy, Ned escorted Pearl up the hill to the neighbors known as "The Valleys." In a four room house, four families bedded down for the night. The children slept in the living room, but none of the adults could sleep.

"I could hear people calling for help, the noise of houses breaking and porches being swept away. The Poplar Street Bridge which is just below our house was washed away."

Toward dawn, Pearl was awakened by her husband who came bustling into the room with a flashlight declaring everyone should go down to the alley light to see the huge river as we may never see another flood.

"I certainly hope not," Pearl wrote.

"It was horrible, only the roofs stuck out at some places."

Pearl had taken all of her food from the refrigerator to the Valleys and was happy to share it for

'Great Find' Demonstrates Collectibility Of Old Literature

LOU ANN GOOD
Food And Family Features Editor

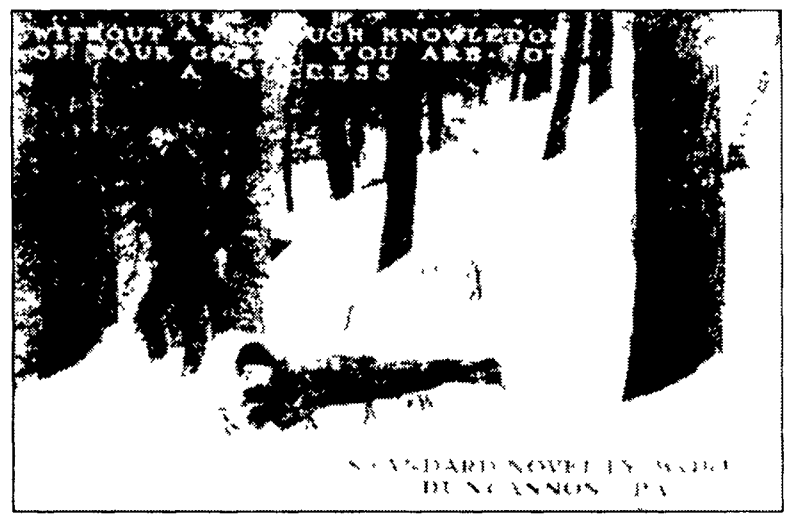
DUNCANNON (Perry Co.) — Old letters, catalogs, sale bills, printed advertisements garner high interest not only among collectors of old literature but also individuals who have a personal connection to select items.

An example of this happened recently. Hassinger and Courtney Auctioneers were preparing the contents of an old hardware store for auction. Hidden in a cache of paper goods stored in the rafters above the third story building, they found a 20-page catalog from Standard Novelty Works, the largest and best-known children's sled manufacturer in the country during the early 1900s. The catalog advertised Lightening Guider sleds, which are highly prized today.

The auctioneers knew the value such printed pieces have to descendants of the business and to those affiliated in some way to the former business.

The auctioneers contacted Jimmy Rosen who owns the former sled factory building in Duncannon. He was interested. Rosen attended the Feb. 15 Auction and purchased the old catalog for $450.

This catalog will be prominently placed in the museum he operates in the former sled factory.



Printed on the front of the 20-page catalog advertising Lightening Guider Sleds are the words: "Without a thorough knowledge of your goods, you are not a success." Hassinger and Courtney Auctioneers believe their implementation of statement was especially beneficial to them when they discovered the catalog among a cache of paper goods stored in the rafters of an hardware store built in 1890. Hassinger contacted Jimmy Rosen who owns the former sled factory building in Duncannon. Rosen purchased the piece for $450.

Printed on the front of the 20-page catalog advertising Lightening Guider Sleds are the words: "Without a thorough knowledge of your goods, you are not a success."

Hassinger and Courtney Auctioneers believe their implementation of this statement was especially beneficial to them. If they would not have recognized both the sentimental and monetary value of the piece and contacted Rosen, he would not have attained the item for his museum display, and the piece might have been discarded.

Rosen, who operates an antique and craft store in addition to the museum in the former sled factory, is delighted with his purchase.

He said, "This is a great find. It's the oldest known piece of Lightening Guider literature that is known, and illustrates many of the companies earliest products."

1936 St. Patrick's Day Flood

breakfast. The Williams family had spent the weekend at the family farm in Schellsburg, where there was plenty of vittles for all.

Ned and Al reached through the window of the flooded Williams cellar to retrieve a hose and began draining the water outside. Al, Ned and Mr. Valley used a broom and burlap sacks to mop up the mud.

Pearl added that they had escaped a lot of the smell of the flood waters because of the mud being removed so quickly.

That evening, Pearl used the large roast she had brought from the Schellsburg farm to make a beef stew, adding a lot of potatoes to make plenty for everyone.

It was the next morning, as the whole neighborhood began cleaning and scrubbing that the real scare came. The word got out that the dam had burst.

"Everyone began crying and screaming. It was awful. I'll never forget it," Pearl says. "I was pretty scared but I said to Ned we may as well pack up and go to the farm as we were going anyway until the house dried out and water was safe to drink."

Packing what clothes they could find in a suitcase, Pearl filled her older son's Christmas wagon with toys and other childhood essentials, and they started for Schellsburg. Halfway to Geistown, they saw Ned's dad, John, and another man walking down the hill. They had come over to get them and would walk if necessary. They had been stopped by police and informed that the dam had broken and they were not allowed to drive any further.

Ned's dad was a long time farmer in Schellsburg and was one of the forerunners of getting Rural Electric to the farms in the area.

Thankfully, everyone was to eventually learn that the dam had not broken.

Ned, Mr. Valley and yet another friend helped clean the Williams' cellar. Even the nails and screws in the workshop were full of mud, so they were dumped on screens to dry. They opened windows and burned two tons of coal in two weeks to dry out the house.

When Pearl and the boys returned from the farm she was horrified at what she saw.

The only livable room was a bedroom Ned had cleaned for them to use. He helped as much as he could, but business at Schenkemeyers was booming and with the Depression just over, money was a necessity.

A German lady next door had looked after their house when they were not there because looting had become a by-product of the flood.

Pots, pans and skillets had to all be taken out of the cupboards and sterilized and scoured. The stove was covered with muddy water but it still worked.

Helen, the Hungarian girl, was a big help with all of the hand cleaning and scouring.

"It took us a week to move everything back downstairs. It took only one night to move it up!

"Helen is such a great helper that I am paying her $3 a week plus her carfare over the weekend," Pearl wrote.

Helen was about to get a job at the Sanitary Dairy but stayed at the Williams' until she was called. Her efforts proved worthwhile as Pearl raised her pay to $1 a day. The two painted and scrubbed the walls and Pearl found new curtains for the living room, kitchen, and bathroom.

It took her three days to write her letter to her sister who, thankfully, treasured it over the years and sent it to us upon her sister's death.

So, as the weather remains cold and the snow melts slowly, we are thankful. A slow melt will mean less chance of flooding. Even though my husband was very young, he remembers the fear and the hard work caused by the devastation of a flood.

THE ANTIQUE DETECTIVE

Old Decanters Can Be Big Bargains

A collection of antique decanters can be not only beautiful and practical, but affordable. Among the least expensive are Victorian pressed and cut glass. They can turn up at garage sales for less than $50 dollars and at auction for a few hundred dollars or even less.

Of course if you want to spend big bucks there are 18th and 19th century examples, silver mounted. Depending on the silversmith, auction prices can be $4,000 and up.

Carafes and jugs have been around since ancient times, but decanters didn't come into usage until the 15th century. The first examples were of dark-colored soda glass or clear lead glass. The term "decanter" was used in early 18th century England.

Shapes changed over the years, offering collectors a wide variety.

They can be found barrel-shaped, cut with flutes to imitate hoops and staves. Others are tapered or with downward-sloping shoulders. Ships decanters are almost a separate category. Their shapes, with wide bases, were made to lessen sliding at sea. Bar decanters, another type, can be recognized by their pewter stoppers.

By the 18th century decanters were being made in most countries of the world. A bit of research will help you recognize the enamel designs of Germany and Bohemia. The glass decanters made in Ireland were deeply cut and engraved. In all countries shape and design followed the prefailing designs and shapes of glass of the period; ie neo-classic and Georgian.

In post-Revolutionary America, glass decanters also used neo-classic motifs, as well as stars and European influences. However, by the 1820s the Bakewell glasshouse in Pittsburgh was turning out hundreds of cut glass decanters. The strawberry diamond pattern, also used in England, was the most popular. By the 1830s decanters with matching wine glasses were introduced. The Boston and Sandwich Glass Company, known for "lacy" pattern pressed glass at this time, also made decanters in blown mold patterns. Among their rarest are those in colors. When they come to auction they can sell for more than a thousand dollars. The good news is they still turn up in garage and estate sales, unrecognized and inexpensive.

Antique Detective

When the blown three-mold process was first made in America around 1820, decanters (and other pieces) were turned out in dozens of patterns. In colorless glass, prices can be $100 to $300.

Decanter jugs and ewers, popular in England and France have a different look. They can be identified by their tall neck, large looped handles and lipped mouth. The ewers often came with matching basins and were mounted in various metals.

In the 1870s elaborate cut glass decanters became the fashion; and the 1876 Philadelphia Centennial inspired patriotic motifs and symbols.

Collector's look for pieces that can be attributed to Christian Dorflinger's Pennsylvania glassworks.

Around the turn-of-the 19th century, the popularity of colorful Victorian art glass was also used for decanters and other drink servers. Art Nouveau swirled designs were often executed in silver deposit on colored glass. Decanters became expensive when they combined glass with silver mountings from Tiffany or Gorham.

CLUES: There have been reproductions os some of the pressed glass decanters in the strawberry and diamond pattern. The oldies have a gray cast. There are also repros of the early three-ring English decanters as well as cranberry glass and color-cut overlay glass.

Hands-on comparisons or a knowledgeable dealer are musts if you want to spend big bucks. However, if you see something cheap take a chance and use it for research.

NEW HOLLAND

OPEN HOUSE 2003
Friday, March 28th 8am to 5pm

NEW HOLLAND

Forrester Farm Equipment was established in 1976 at 1337 LWE East, selling and servicing used tractors in the area. Dedicated to providing his customers with the best in customer satisfaction, Jay Forrester grew his business. Today we carry on his tradition by providing our customers with the type of service they have learned to expect from Forrester Farm Equipment. In addition to your satisfaction, New Holland has awarded us with the coveted President's Prestige Award for outstanding achievement in business management and customer satisfaction. In 2003, we will work even harder to provide you with the excellent products, service and support you've come to expect.

When It's Time to Plant Go With The PRO

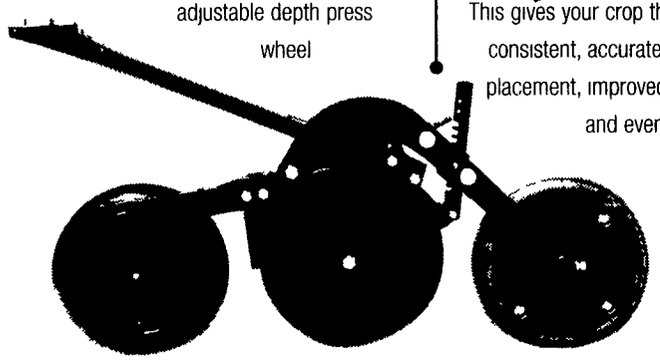
Krause 5250 Series PRO-System No-Till Grain Drills break new ground for precise, accurate seed depth control!

PRO-System drills feature Krause's exclusive precision residue opener which utilizes a 3" x 14" depth gauging wheel in front of the double disc opener, followed by an adjustable depth press wheel

The drawbar pivots above the opener, allowing the gauge wheel, opener and press wheel to cross over uneven ground while maintaining precise control of seeding depth This gives your crop the advantage of consistent, accurate seed depth placement, improved seed germination, and even stand emergence



KRAUSE

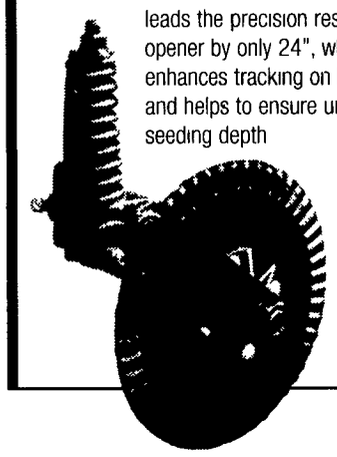
leads the precision residue opener by only 24", which enhances tracking on hillsides and helps to ensure uniform seeding depth



- Available in 13' or 15' Widths
- Staggered Rows
- 3"x13" Press Wheels
- ¾" Fluted N/T Coulters
- Small Grass Seed Attachment
- Acre Meter
- Equipped with Hoober's Front Wheel Drive for Optimum Weight Transfer and Seed Depth Control

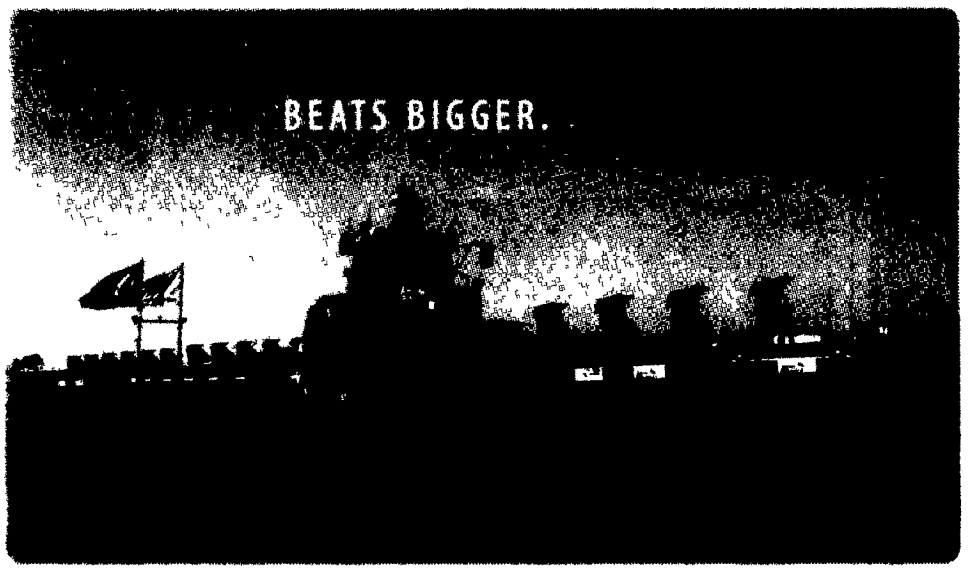
FARM SERVICE, INC BETHEL, PA



How do you shatter the world plowing record set by a 425 hp track tractor? You don't have to get bigger. You don't have to get tracks. You just have to get better. That's what happened when the Massey Ferguson 8280 fixed frame wheeled tractor set a new world record The MF 8280 fine tuned to deliver 387 hp, outdid the predecessor by nearly 100 acres, plowing 621 acres in 24 hours

What makes the MF 8280 better? Take a world class engine, a transmission that won't quit and add a powerful hydraulic system. Throw in a high tech control system that automatically monitors and adjusts the flow of power to the wheels for less slip and you've got better more than 24 acres an hour better.

So don't just get a bigger tractor next time you have a big job to do. Get a better tractor. Get a Massey Ferguson 8280 and shatter some records yourself.

PREPARE TO INCREASE PROFITS NEXT SEASON WITH OUR

WINTER SERVICE PROGRAM

Less wastage, increased equipment productivity, enhanced value, easier and faster repairs. These aren't just ideals, they're reality for people who regularly service, maintain and repair their equipment instead of waiting for it to break down in the field. And winter downtime offers the perfect pause to do just that.

Deer Creek Equipment will come out to your farm and do a thorough inspection of your equipment, then give you an estimate of repairs if any are needed. If your repair bill exceeds $1,000 and you elect to have Deer Creek do the necessary work, the initial inspection fee will be waived!

Inspection Programs:

- On-Farm Combine: $159
- On-Farm Self Propelled Forage Harvester: $229
- On-Farm Pull Type Forage Harvester: $159
- On-Farm Baler (Round or Square): $129
- On-Farm Planter: $24.99 per row
- Other Equipment: Inspections available, call for pricing

ROW CROP TRACTOR PERFORMANCE TESTING

Deer Creek offers many different ways to make sure your tractor is ready to roll in the spring. Call us about having any of these function tests performed.

DYNO
Check your tractor's horsepower and performance - are you getting everything you need?

OIL SCAN
Check your oil condition - see if any contaminants are in your oil, and also check for any early signs of engine wear.

COOLANT SCAN
Same as oil scan, but this checks your coolant condition. Coolant breakdown is the number one cause of cylinder liner failure.

BATTERY AND CHARGING TEST
Check your electrical system and make sure you start in the spring.

HYDRAULIC TEST
Check your pressures and GPM

BALLAST

R134a CONVERSION
Old style freon (R12) has risen dramatically in the last few years. It continues upward at a rate of roughly 35% more each year. R12 has not been manufactured anywhere in the world since 1995. As supplies continue to dwindle, costs rise sharply each year. The fact is soon you will not be able to obtain R12. As the cost of maintaining your R12 machine rises, it will become more cost effective to retrofit than use R12. Can you afford NOT to retrofit?

AGCO WHITE PLANTERS

You've picked the perfect seed –

FIELDSTAR READY

- Superior Seed Singulation
- ½ inch to 4-inch planting depth
- Improved Seed Meter Access
- Easy-to-View Seed Depth Indicator
- Quick Release Hoppers

INTRODUCING THE WHITE 8000 SERIES PLANTERS

You've done your research, prepared your field, and picked the perfect seed variety. Now plant that perfect row, with the 8000 Series planter from White. With 49 models to match your needs, they're packed with features that save time and plant 4 to 31 rows of corn or soybeans with unmatched precision. The 8000 Series features an improved seed meter design for outstanding accuracy with a wider variety of seed sizes. And standard walking beam gauge wheels along with increased planting depth range of ½ inch to 4 inches give superior depth control over larger surface irregularities. Select models feature "on-the-go" seed rate adjustment from your tractor cab. FlexFrame designs range from 30' to 60' for an "acre-eater" performance from one end of your field to the other.

It's time to plant the perfect row. Stop by your White Planter Dealer today and get it right with WHITE.

GREENLAND

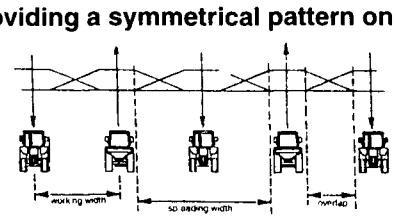
Vicon SUPERFLOW SEEDER

Spreaders are the most accurate broadcast spreaders in the world. The unique pendulum action keeps the spread pattern close to the rear of the machine while at the same time providing a symmetrical pattern on both sides.



The pattern allows "back and forth" as well as "around and around" operation. The "truncated" pattern offsets inaccurate overlap problems, eliminating streaking.

Rust free polyester hoppers, "DURA-COAT" enamel on painted components with stainless steel metering plates, precision adjustments, and a variety of spouts for a multitude of applications have earned Vicon Superflow seeder spreaders a world-wide reputation as the premier broadcast spreader.

Vicon
Seeder spreaders are easily calibrated for extremely accurate performance.

Versatile Vicon spreaders band material in vineyards, orchards and nurseries, as well as spread lime, and salt and sand for winter use.

Introducing the RC•50, R•50, and RC•30

Twenty-four rubber wheels spread machine weight over a large ground contact area, so these machines exert very low ground pressure - ideal on landscapes or soft conditions.

Heavy hitter.

Designed exclusively for you, Case XT Series skid steers take on heavy lifting jobs, breeze through severe applications such as heavy materials handling and handle larger, more productive attachments. ■ These XTs include a choice of heavy lift-and-reach or conventional linkage models, the greatest lifting power on the market, massive loader arm construction and ergonomically designed excavator-style control levers. All designed to give you the most from these machines. ■ The XT Series. When you've got a job that requires a heavyweight.

Pennsylvania Ag Business Loan Program Unveiled At York Co. Nursery

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — The Pennsylvania Landscape and Nursery Association (PLNA) and Senate Agriculture and Rural Affairs Chairman Mike Waugh (R-York) unveiled the Small Business First Program (SBF) and Machinery and Equipment Loan Fund (MELF) during a press conference Thursday, Feb. 27, at Shiloh Nurseries, Inc. in Emigsville, Pa.

The programs provide agribusinesses with an opportunity to qualify for low-interest loans for the purchase of equipment, land, buildings, and machinery. It also provides for lower interest rates if loans are filed within nine months of a natural disaster, such as the drought of 2002. The legislation, which was signed into law last year, was originally introduced by Senator Mike Waugh.

"Technology is a critical ingredient of success in our industry and these programs will help horticultural businesses finance technological improvements," said Gregg Robertson, President of PLNA. "In a recent survey of our members, more than 30% of respondents said obtaining and implementing the latest technology into their operations was of great importance to their future success."

Prior to the passage of bipartisan supported legislation, business and organizations were required to create jobs to be eligible to qualify for the SBF and MELF loans granted through the Department of Community and Economic Development. In addition, no consideration was given to the impact of natural disasters, such as drought, and the need for loan assistance following such devastating events.

A revolutionary concept. NO traditional blower -high capacity output of feed - even long cut and varying moisture levels
Available in 16' to 30', 1 or 3 cables

Pole Buildings

- Pole Buildings - A pole building is typically built by drilling a hole 36" to 48" in depth, making sure we are below the frost line, in at least an 18" diameter hole. In the bottom of the hole a concrete footing is used to support each individual pole. The pole is placed in the hole with a minimum of .60 CCA treatment to insure against insect and moisture decay.
- The structure is then framed with 2x4 SPF #2 or better, on 24" centers for wind and diaphragm strength for the building.
- The RigidPly Rafters engineered trusses are set 48" center-to-center on top of a double header system made of MSR (Machine stress rated) lumber. This double MSR header system carries the snow and roof loads to the footers and the ground.
- Painted FABRAL Steel roofing and siding is screw fastened to the purlins and girts at 9" centers to help secure the metal to the structure for winds over 120 mile per hour.
- Wayne Dalton garage doors are expertly hung in the proper locations to provide easy opening and closing.
- Plyco products such as ridge vents and cupolas are installed for proper air flow and condensation control.

- Serving PA, NJ, DE, MD, VA, WV, and NY
- Company crews for quick service & quality construction
- Professional Sales and Marketing Team
- Building Excellence Since 1989!

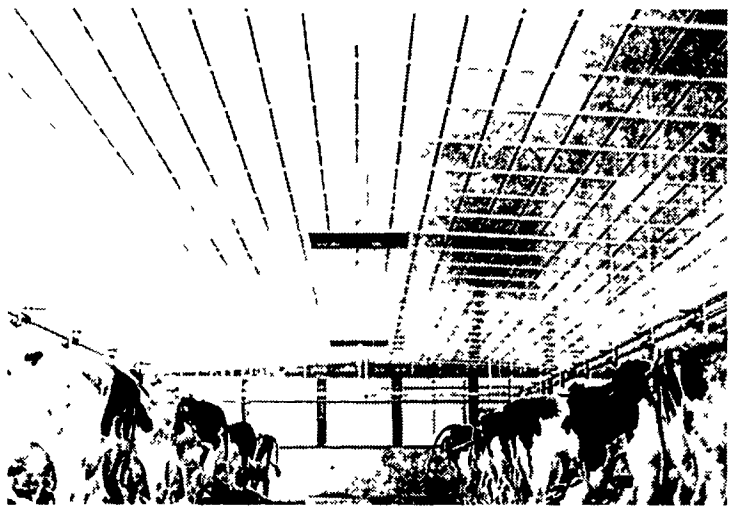
– Ceiling systems designed for your dairy, swine, and poultry facilities, as well – as shops, warehouses, garages, arenas, and more.

Is the banding in your hog or poultry barn deteriorating?

Let us replace them with our heavier polyester bands which do not stretch or become brittle over time



Are you frustrated with the birds in your implement shed?

Get the problem under control with a triply ceiling, as well as greatly improving the lighting.

Tired of working in a cold, noisy shop?

These ceiling systems are designed to hold any amount of insulation, and with insulation above, produce sound reduction qualities much greater than steel.

Contemplating a drop ceiling?

Demand a triply ceiling above your drop ceiling if there is insulation being installed. This will serve as a vapor barrier as well as permanently preventing falling insulation.

Providing the Ag industry with a very durable, attractive, waterproof, noncorrosive, alternative to conventional ceilings at a fraction of the cost.

Galvanized or Galvalume?

For metal roofing and siding, which is better, painted Galvanized or painted Galvalume?. Galvanizing is many times better if it's mill certified G100 Why is it better? Galvanizing tends to "heal" when scratched The more galvanizing, the better Everlast is ten times better at "healing" than galvalume because galvalume hardly "heals" at all when scratched Also cut edges rust quickly on galvalume

Having Problems Getting Milk Cold?

Consider a Mueller pre-cooler. It's an excellent way to lower the cost of cooling milk. It reduces milk temperature with water pumped straight out of your well. Mueller® precoolers are available in sizes to work with any system. If lower electric bills would make your life easier, call us and ask for more information on Mueller precoolers.

BEEF TIPS
Commercial cattlemen benefit greatly from cross-breeding of two or more breeds By crossbreeding, hybrid vigor (or heterosis) is produced providing better performance than the average of the two parent breeds Maximum heterosis results when the cow and bull are of entirely different breeds Cross-breeding can also be used to combine the strengths of two different breeds

Attention: Swine and Poultry Producers

Announcing
Crude Soy Oil Now Available
With the addition of our new soybean processing facility, we now offer soybean oil as an animal nutrition product Processing the soybeans ourselves allows us to utilize locally grown soybeans and support our local agricultural community!

Crude Soybean Oil
A product of Keystone's expelling process, this oil can be used in a wide variety of on farm applications Crude soy oil is a natural alternative to animal fats and provides needed energy in various rations

Uses of Crude Soy Oil Include:
- Use as a high energy feed ingredient in swine and poultry diets.
- Especially useful in sow lactation diets, pig starter and grow/finish diets
- Used as an added energy source in broiler, turkey and layer feeds
- Can be used for dust control purposes
- Can be used as a lubricant for feeding systems

Advantages of Crude Soy Oil:
- Use as a direct replacement for animal fat
- Vegetable based product
- Holding tank does not need to be heated if temperature is above 30 degrees, which reduces storage and handling costs compared to animal fat
- Bulk delivery, partial loads available direct to farm by Keystone Mills
- Customer may pick up to save delivery costs

Other Soy Products Available:
- Keystone offers Golden Pro 46 XP which is 46% protein - 6-7% oil, Golden Meal 40 which is 40% crude protein with 18% oil

Keystone Mills Soybean Exchange Program
- We will take your soybeans in trade for Golden ProXP 46, Golden Meal 40
- Contact Keystone Mills for details on our soybean exchange program featuring these quality nutritional products

Training Horses

Pressure, Release Means Please, Thank You

MICHELLE KUNJAPPU

ROCKSPRING (Centre Co.) — "The system builds upon itself."

Brian Egan, horse program assistant, Penn State, explained the method used to train horses at the university during 2002 Ag Progress Days.

"The system is based on pressure-and-release," he said. Physical and spatial pressure can be used to guide the horses, according to Egan.

The first lesson is to teach a horse to lead, which Egan demonstrated in the Horse Arena at Ag Progress Days last August.

Egan used a 2-year-old Quarter horse for his demonstration. When a horse is accustomed to the halter, he said, the handler should try

Mini Horses Enhance Vet Tech Program

ALFRED, N.Y.—They say good things come in small packages. Folks in Alfred State College's veterinary technology program know it's true.

The two-year program, which enrolls 100 students, was the recipient of a gift of seven miniature horses, a loan arrangement with a couple from Conesus, N.Y.

Five of these miniature horses arrived at the college farm on Labor Day—Fizz, 7; Angel, 2; Tiara, yearling; and Diamond, 6 months. Two others, Sunny, 7, and Rhapsody, 8, joined the group on Nov. 2. Copper, a 15-year-old gelding, was purchased half by the vet tech program and half by Program Instructor Kathleen Bliss at the end of September. Copper is also part of the on-campus group, bringing the total number to seven miniature horses.

"Fizz," 7, will help Alfred State College students learn skills that they will transfer to larger horses.

High-Tech Help For Horses At Equine Medical Center

MICHELLE KUNJAPPU
Lancaster Farming Staff

LEESBURG, Va. — The threefold mission of service, teaching, and research may be a tall order to fill, but at the Marion duPont Scott Equine Medical Center, the three tiers of the mission seem to dovetail nicely.

Fulfilling the service aspect, between 2,300-2,400 patients come to the Marion duPont Scott Equine Medical Center each year.

Teaching, another part of the mission, is fulfilled with the fourth year veterinary students from the Virginia-Maryland Regional College of Veterinary Medicine who come to study at the center each year.

Founded in 1984, the center has served as a training ground for more than 450 veterinary students.

With the research projects under way at the center, "we approach the area that we know we have the expertise to help solve — we're not trying to be all things to all horses," said director Dr. Fred Fregin.

Ongoing research on colic, the leading cause of death among horses, is an example.

"We first define the problem, then find the best people put together to work on that problem."

Facilities

Marion duPont Scott, seeing the need for an equine hospital in Virginia, made a pledge in 1981 of $4 million to fund the center's construction.

Besides raising Saddlebred and Thoroughbred horses, Scott was the first woman to ride astride at the national horse show and was the owner of "Battleship," the first American owned-and-trained horse to win the Grand National.

Providing 200 acres of property for the center was the Westmoreland Davis Memorial Foundation. The foundation oversees the historic Westmoreland Davis Mansion, two equestrian museums and an equestrian center that adjoin the hospital grounds.

An additional $2 million from other donors equipped the hospital. Eighty percent of the equipment, in fact, was made possible by private donations.

"In August of '83 there wasn't any equipment or employees," said center director Fred Fregin. "I had one desk and one lamp that I brought for myself," he said.

The need for an equine treatment center in the area was made immediately obvious, as within six months of opening they saw 600 horses.

Facilities include an intensive care unit, two surgical suites, two radiology suites, a clinical diagnostic laboratory, a pharmacy, a high-speed treadmill facility, a farriers' shop for corrective shoeing, and accommodations for 29 patients, besides an eight-stall isolation unit in progress.

A variety of horses are admitted to the hospital for treatment. "We really see the full spectrum of horses," said Ann Nadjar, assistant director of development.

"There is a perception that we see only elite horses, but we also care for everything from horses that compete on the international level to miniature horses, mules, donkeys, and a lot of backyard horses," she said. "

In addition, approximately 50 foals are referred to the center in the foaling season from January to July.

The center offers round-the clock emergency service, so veterinarians at the center can quickly help horses with life-threatening fractures or colic.

"There is someone in the barns 24/7," said Nadjar. "Last year 750 emergencies came in, the majority during the evening or weekend." Colic is, in fact, the leading surgical procedure at the center.

Designed as a referral-only hospital, the center takes patients that are referred by the horse's regular veterinarian, so it does not compete with ambulatory practices in the area.

The original staff of 17 has more than doubled over the years. There are approximatly 50 full-time employees including includes doctors, surgeons, technicians, professors, instructors, veterinary technicians (nurses), and administrators.

Approximately 50 part-time

workers are employed in various departments.

The surgery area is equipped with four induction and recovery stalls. The system of swinging doors and padded walls allow an anesthetized horse to sink softly to the sternal position, and from there they are placed on the surgical table and rolled into surgery, explained Nadjar.

One of the two surgical suites offers an observation room for owners.

Following surgery, the horses take 30-45 minutes to recover, which they do in a padded stall with dimmed lights and the verbal encouragement from an attendant. Oxygen is also available to help the patient recover.

Although it is a university teaching hospital, less than 20 percent of the center's funding comes from state and university resources and those funds may be directed only towards teaching of the fourth-year veterinary students on rotation at the hospital.

The majority of the funding comes from patient care revenue, although private fundraising has paved the way for such projects as a new treadmill facility and an eight-stall isolation unit now under construction.

Whenever a horse is isolated in the hospital, said Nadjar, any caretaker entering the stall will wear boots, gloves, and a gown to prevent cross-contamination. Although these extensive sanitary procedures are in place for the barns now, "this (new) building is set up to facilitate that (bio-control) more easily," she said. Each stall will have separate air handling capability to allow hospitalization for horses with potentially contagious respiratory conditions.

The center also has two 12-stall barns, five intensive care unit stalls, and a few holding stalls in use.

The center is one of three campuses which make up the Virginia-Maryland Regional College of Veterinary Medicine. The college is jointly operated by Virginia Tech and University of Maryland with its main campus in Blacksburg, Virginia and an additional campus in College Park, Maryland.

Teresa Twaddle, director of nursing, prepares medication to treat a horse here at the center.

Treadmill

A new addition to the center is the James P. Mills Diagnostic Treadmill Building. The treadmill service was introduced in April 2002.

The treadmill has proven to be a valuable diagnostic tool, according to Dr. Celia Goodall, clinical instructor in equine surgery. In the spring and fall, peak training times, the treadmill is used 2-3 times a week.

"We want the horses when they're completely fit because we're going to run them as if they're in a race," she said.

Mini Horses Help Students

Owners of the horses, Nancy and Kip Gillen of Dare to Dream Miniatures, Conesus, are unique in that Nancy Gillen is a wheelchair-bound paraplegic with limited use of her arms, and Kip Gillen is allergic to horses.

Though physically handicapped, Nancy Gillen cares for and feeds her minis, then shows and drives a mini-horse cart through the spring and summer season. Kip Gillen is responsible for horse care in inclement weather. Unfortunately allergies are at their worst at that time, making the horse care a burden. In addition, this fall, Mrs. Gillen required surgery.

Consequently, the idea of lending the minis to Alfred State College for the school year was appealing to the Gillens and very attractive to the vet tech program.

Bolton and students in the farm animal management course have been learning a lot from the minis this fall.

Why minis?

"As vet techs the students will probably have to work with horses," said professor Victoria Bolton, but large horses are "flighty and dangerous" if you don't know exactly what you are doing. It's much easier to learn about handling and restraining horses on the minis, and then transfer the skills for work on the larger animals, said Bolton.

"The minis are calmer and adapt more quickly to change than the large horses," she said, but they "exhibit all the characteristics and attitudes of a large horse." The biggest thing for students to adjust to is how much easier it is to care for the minis, said Bolton.

Caring for one large horse is equal to what it takes to care for four minis, especially along the lines of feeding, cleaning, stalling, exercising, and grooming, said Bolton. A full-grown miniature weighs between 200 and 300 pounds whereas a large adult horse weighs about 1,200 pounds.

During the spring semester, Bolton hopes to work with students in some independent study courses getting several of the minis ready for show. These will include halter, trail, obstacle course, and jumping classes.

"Diamond" and "Fizz" are on loan to the vet tech program at Alfred State, Alfred, N.Y.

The treadmill helps Goodall evaluate racehorses to find problems such as upper airway disease or low blood oxygen levels.

The horses are schooled on and around the treadmill before they even begin to walk on the equipment. Next the horses stand on the treadmill and begin with a walk before progressing "when we are comfortable with how things are going" the horses are asked to the trot and canter for about five miles. The entire schooling takes 20 to 30 minutes.

After that initiation, the horses are taken to the barn for a rest and a little feed before being brought back for the test.

"Once they're schooled and completely happy," the treadmill handler coaxes the horse into a full run — 30 miles an hour for racehorses — which is necessary if Goodall is to determine the cause of the horse's poor performance or problematic medical condition.

In addition to the flat-out run, an increase in incline helps increase the work output, she said.

To aid in diagnosis, Goodall inserts a small catheter in the facial artery to measure blood oxygen content. Lower airway disease may result in an abnormally low oxygen content in the blood, said Goodall.

A videoendoscope passed down the nose and attached to a camera gives an image of the animal's airway on a nearby computer screen. The picture generated on the screen is recorded and put on the computer, and Goodall will "save the video pictures of what's best representative of the horse's condition," she said.

Goodall will also listen for upper respiratory tract noise, besides checking on the animal's heart and lungs.

If Goodall determines that there is an upper respiratory tract obstruction, surgery is recommended. Other conditions Goodall may observe causing poor performance may be associated with heart arrhythmias or elevated muscle enzymes.

Even though the procedure is foreign and potentially frightening to horses, there have been few problems, according to Goodall. "Strict protocol — I think that really helps us avoid problems and complications," she said, noting that following the set routine seems to work for most horses.

"Safety for the horses is the most important thing."

Students

Since the first patient was seen in 1984, the center has served as a training ground for more than 450 veterinary students.

The "overwhelming majority," of veterinary students, according to Nadjar, are female. During each three week rotation, two to six fourth-year veterinary students are at the center for observation and hands on experience.

Since the center is one of three campuses, the students may find themselves sitting in classes via video teleconferencing.

Harrisburg Hosts America's Largest Indoor All-Breed Horse Show

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Last fall, the Farm Show Complex hosted the first show of the indoor circuit, the Pennsylvania National Horse Show.

The show, which accepts 1,100 to 1,200 of North America's exceptional horses and riders, is America's largest indoor all-breed horse show.

Hunters and jumpers, American Saddlebreds and Hackney ponies, draft horse hitches, western horses, roadster horses, and ponies all have their time in the spotlight during the competition.

Amy DeVisser, Cazenovia, N.Y., readies "Puma" for a speed class.

Eleven national championships are decided at the show.

For the 2002 show, prize money for several classes was increased, bringing the total monies offered to $325,000.

The event's highlight was the $60,000 Budweiser Grand Prix de Penn National on Saturday night, Oct. 19. The event drew North America's top horses and riders, including many Olympic and World Cup veterans.

Juniors also compete at the show. The USA/BET National Junior Jumper Team Championship is one of a handful of USA Junior Olympics-Equestrian events.

Saddlebred numbers and depth increased dramatically as the National Horse Show finals were conducted in Harrisburg for the first time, drawing competitors in all Saddlebred divisions from across the country.

The show also hosted international contestants, with amateur and professional competitors from Germany, Bermuda, Brazil, Canada, and Ireland.

Exhibitors in the event housed their horses in the new 140-stall horse barn and the just-completed 1,700 seat indoor arena, which provided a much needed exercise area out of the often inclement weather.

"The future of the Pennsylvania National Horse Show has never looked brighter," president Elizabeth Shorb said. "In 2003 we will present the show in what may be the newest, largest, and most accommodating indoor horse show venue in the nation."

The 66-year-old Farm Show Complex, after its more than $86 million expansion and renovation, stables up to 3,000 horses. One feature is the new 1,700-seat arena with a floor measuring 150 feet by 300 feet.

Before the facility was expanded, the show "had room to accept only about 1,200 of the 1,600 horses that apply to compete at Harrisburg," Shorb said. "The 10-day show starts early each morning and runs most nights until 10 p.m. or later, without much of a break.

"We use every inch of available space and there had been no room to add more horses, classes, divisions, vendors or exhibitions. With the new facility, we can accept more entries, accommodate more schooling areas, and offer space to more vendors.

"In fact, with the ability to stable 3,000 horses and run two rings simultaneously — all indoors — there's no telling how big the show might become."

This year's competition will be conducted Oct. 9-18.

For information, write to 720 Limekiln Road, New Cumberland, PA, 17070, or phone (717) 770-0222.

In the hunter conformation classes, the judge called the top horses back into the ring to be evaluated for soundness and conformation.

Riders worked to keep their horses looking effortless and stylish over the jumps.

Judges carefully observed each round, looking for horses that carried a smooth pace and created an attractive picture — ears pricked forward and knees up and squared over the jumps.

Equine Cold Weather Care

KENNETT SQUARE (Chester Co.) — How are you managing your horse during the cold weather? Horses can tolerate cold conditions much better than heat, provided we give them a little help. Dr. Mark Donaldson of New Bolton Center, the large animal facility of the University of Pennsylvania School of Veterinary Medicine, offers the following tips.

Although the barn may feel nice and warm to in the morning after the horses have spent the night inside with all the doors closed, the lack of ventilation can cause respiratory problems.

Poor ventilation concentrates ammonia from urine, mold particles from hay, and respiratory viruses. Adequate ventilation is necessary even in the coldest months.

Most horses thrive outside when provided with a shelter from the wind and access to adequate water and feed. Being in a pasture provides cleaner air and the opportunity for exercise.

The winter coat is great insulation, so if you do not plan to exercise your horse in the winter forgo the blanket and don't clip his coat. As the temperature drops, the horse's nutritional requirements increase.

A good quality hay (rather than grain) best provides the additional calories needed to keep the horse in good health. Your veterinarian can help you obtain a nutritional analysis of your hay to ensure it provides all the nutrients needed.

When feeding several horses outside make certain the social order of the herd does not prevent some horses from getting enough to eat. Although large round bales may be more prone to mold they are a reasonable source of nutrition provided they are under a shelter and off the ground.

Horses should eat about 1.5-3.0 percent of their body weight per day in hay, which is 15 to 30 pounds per day for a 1,000 pound horse.

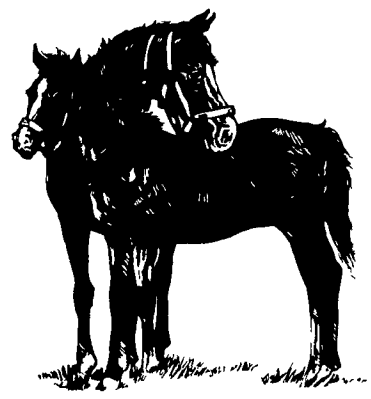
Horses' metabolic rates vary just as people's do, and it is best to feed them according to body condition. Look and feel for fat over the ribs, on the top line, over the tail head, and under the mane.

Bruce Rappoport, associate dean of Penn's Veterinary School and director of New Bolton Center, examines Joker and Promise, two of the school's three Morgan driving horses.

For horses that need a few extra calories, the diet can be supplemented with vegetable oil or rice bran. To ensure your horse is able to get all he can from his food regular dental maintenance and deworming are essential.

Closely monitor your horse's water source. Dehydration can lead to intestinal impactions and colic. Studies have shown horses drink less water when it is cold. Automatic waters that are insulated and obtain heat from the ground and bucket heaters are helpful in providing an adequate supply of water.

Equine senior citizens need some extra consideration and careful monitoring during winter months. Older horses don't thermo-regulate as well as youngsters, and may require blankets to prevent heat loss. Many geriatric horses suffer from arthritis, and good footing is essential to ensure they are able to assess their food and water safely.



Pennsylvania Equine Council Scheduled To Conduct Riding Trail Update

GETTYSBURG (Adams Co.) — On Wednesday, March 19 at 7 p.m. the Pennsylvania Equine Council will conduct a current issues meeting at the Adams County Agricultural and Natural Resource Center located at 670 Old Harrisburg Road, Gettysburg.

Topics will include equestrian access to public lands — game commission lands, new regulations restricting equine access (effective Feb. 1), criteria used by the game commission to approve designated trails for equine use, access to other public lands, how to retain our access to public lands, the new Equine Liability Bill — what is it and how will it affect us, and upcoming manure management regulations. Speakers will be Bud and Gwen Wills, Pennsylvania Equine Council State Trails Chairpersons.

For more information on this meeting please contact Amy Skvarka, Pennsylvania Equine Council, Region 8 Director at (717) 528-8588 or via e-mail at cloverbug@adelphia.net.

stepping out to a corner in front of the horse and hold the lead line taut.

"As soon as the horse steps to you, release the pressure," he said. "It is like saying 'thank you for doing the right thing.'

"In everything you ask a horse to do, you must first say please and give it direction to where you want it to go."

Apply pressure, said Egan, then as soon as they move stop asking, stop pressure, "and that becomes 'thank you.'

"Make the right way easy and the wrong thing difficult so they chose to do the right thing," he said.

Graduating to the lunge line uses the same system. First Egan teaches the horse to move away by putting pressure on the horse's head by gently pulling the lunge line with his left hand, then stepping toward the horse's flank and tapping on its hip.

"I consider this to be just an extension of the lead rope," he said. The lunge line is simply a lead from 30 feet, he explained. Egan used the lunge whip "not as a whip, since we want them to be accepting of the whip, but as an extension of my arm, just like reaching out and tapping the horse," he said.

> "In everything you ask a horse to do, you must first say 'please' and give it direction to where you want it to go."
> Brian Egan
> Penn State

When the horse began circling Egan at the full distance of the line, "notice I am not walking," he said. "I keep my left foot in a relatively stable location and pivot.

"His (the horse's) job is to stay at the end of the line," said Egan. "If I'm walking all over the place, how does he know where the end of the line is?"

If a horse attempts to come in toward the trainer, Egan simply taps it with the lunge whip in the mid-neck area.

To encourage the animal to go faster, Egan tapped the horse with the lunge whip on the animals' rib cage, "where the rider's legs would normally be," he said. At all times Egan kept his shoulders parallel to the line, facing the same direction as the horse's forward movement.

If the horse drops in toward the trainer, "step out toward them and send them toward the end of that line. Don't pull the line up," he said. The horse will quickly learn that it, not the trainer, is in charge of the workout if they find they can drop in toward their trainer, he said.

Lunging a horse not only takes off their edge of energy but also communicates to the horse that the trainer will "not to let it do what he wants, but what I ask him to do," said Egan. "A horse that starts to breathe heavy starts to think clearer."

The third reason to lunge a horse is not only to teach it manners but also to ride. "Everything we do on the ground correlates to under-saddle work," he said.

To stop the horse, Egan puts a backward "V" in the line. However "we don't necessarily want him to come in. Send them back out so they don't come in each time they stop," he said.

Working with horses requires patience and time, according to Egan.

"People get in a hurry," he said. "You need to give your horse time to learn and absorb information."

To prepare the animal for a rider, "time on the ground leads to manners. He may act up but it doesn't take long to learn that all he has to do is stop" for the saddle to stop tightening.

Egan lunged the quarter horse with the stirrups tied together to let the animal get used to the feel of the saddle.

By attaching long lines to the horse's bridle and walking behind the horse, Egan further readied the horse for riding by teaching it to turn, stop, and back with pressure in the animal's mouth through the long lines.

Egan didn't expect an immediate stop from the animal. "If we want a horse to stop, we don't ever think stop. We think slow down," he said. "Stop is an extreme slow down."

At Penn State, the horses are first ridden in a 12 foot by 12 foot stall in the barn, an area where the horses are already comfortable. Next they graduate to being ridden in a 12-foot-wide, 18-feet-long hallway.

In his demonstration Egan slowly put his foot in the stirrup, waited, and returned to the ground before repeating the process and resting his weight across the animals' back. He then mounted and rested in the saddle for a moment.

"The best thing to do when you get on a horse for the first time is get off," he said. The animal is already anxious, he said, so a rider reinforces that being ridden is a trap to the horse if they stay mounted too long, he said.

Pa. 4-H Leaders Recognized At AYHC National Youth Horse Leaders Symposium

ST. LOUIS, Mo. — Ethel Miller, a Pennsylvania 4-H Horse leader from Montgomery County received the received the 2002 National Youth Horse Leader of the Year Award at the National Youth Horse Leaders Symposium, sponsored by the American Youth Horse Council (AYHC) conducted recently in St. Louis, Missouri.

Miller, a volunteer leader from Green Lane, received the award based on her horse industry involvement, contributions to the youth horse industry, innovative approaches to working with youth, and industry promotion in her local community.

This is the second consecutive year that Pennsylvania 4-H horse leaders have received the AYHC National Youth Horse Leader Award. Patty Kelly of Westmoreland County received the inaugural award presented by AYHC for 2001.

Miller has been the organizational leader of the TimberTalk Trotters 4-H club in Montgomery County for sixteen years. She is responsible for overseeing many club activities as well as planning meetings.

She acts as a liaison between the club and the county 4-H office. When she became the organizational leader, there were only five members in the club. Now with her leadership and guidance, the club has grown to 40 youth.

Throughout her sixteen years Miller has shown exceptional leadership by emphasizing learning over winning. The 4-H motto, "making the best better," correlates to her idea that learning is best done by actual experience and not by lecturing alone.

Within the club, she gives adult leaders responsibilities based on their individual strengths and weaknesses. She teaches her youth about leadership because she believes that it is an important life skill they should master. With this in mind, Miller encourages the youth to manage the club and conduct club meetings with minimal involvement of adults.

Not only has Miller taught her club members about horsemanship skills, but she also believes in using the horse as a tool to teach youth life skills that will be necessary for their adult years.

Her most successful idea is one that involves using the horse to teach public speaking skills. She has the younger members take a classic childhood tale and turn it into a humorous script about horse knowledge. Her ideas have influenced other clubs and have resulted in more than a tripling in size of the Regional Communications Competition.

Besides her work in the TimberTalk Trotters Horse Club, Miller has also been involved with the Montgomery County Hippology Team. She holds monthly meetings at the beginning of each year in an attempt to recruit new members and educate the older ones. She has encouraged many people to become involved in this event, which test 4-H members' knowledge of horses and horsemanship.

Miller has also been a part of many people's accomplishments. She was the coach and leader of two national 4-H winners in communication contests, and one winner of the PA 4-H Horse Program Outstanding Member Award.

Work Group Focuses On Education Of Horse Owners

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — The Small Scale Non-Production Livestock Work Group was formed in December 2000 to address the water quality, nutrient runoff, and erosion concerns that can arise from animal operations, particularly equine operations, when proper pasture management, manure management and runoff controls are not practiced.

Animal operations that raise livestock for production purposes (wool, meat, milk, eggs, etc.) are subject to the statewide Nutrient Management Act (NMA) regulations.

Equine operations, unless it is a breeding operation, are not currently addressed under the NMA, and that lead some municipalities in Pennsylvania to start asking for guidance about how to handle these operations.

In the future, equine operations are expected to be included in the NMA regulations, however, it is also expected that smaller operations will not be covered. To stay current with the NMA regulations, check out http: // panutrientmgmt . cas . psu.edu.

The Small Scale Non-Production Livestock Work Group is comprised of representatives from various county Conservation Districts, the PA Department of Environmental Protection (DEP), USDA Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS), the PA State Conservation Commission, Penn State University Cooperative Extension Service, the PA Ombudsman Program, municipal representatives, York County Planning Commission, and various livestock organizations.

The work group felt that the majority of animal owners who have environmental concerns, such as nutrient runoff, erosion, and pasture management concerns want to "do the right thing" but are not aware of what to do to correct their environmental problems or where to go for help. The work group felt that education would be a more powerful and effective way to deal with this than more regulations would be.

The goals and objectives of the work group have been two-fold. The first efforts of the work group have been to create statewide zoning guidelines to give municipalities across the state a set of guidelines to work with when creating zoning ordinances dealing with small scale (typically equine) operations.

The work group deliberated for almost two years to be sure the guidelines would consider the care and keeping of horses while protecting the environment. The guidelines are expected to debut in early April.

The second goal of this work group is to do an aggressive educational and outreach campaign in Pennsylvania. The work group is working to greatly improve the educational materials available in Pennsylvania that show animal owners what Best Management Practices (BMPs) are available to improve their current operation.

Issues such as proper pasture management, proper manure management, water quality concerns, eliminating muddy areas, and composting options are being addressed. These are intended to improve the health and safety of the animals, as well as reduce the pollution potential that some small scale animal operations create.

The work group also intends to educate the technical staff in Pennsylvania's agricultural agencies that typically work with animal operations about the special issues that may need to be addressed when they are working with an equine operation.

These agencies, such as your county Conservation District, local USDA NRCS or local Penn State Cooperative Extension service personnel are typically accustomed to working with cattle, swine and poultry operations. However, these agencies are available to assist the equine operations as well.

The educational information that is being developed through the efforts of this work group will be available at Ag Progress Days in August, in Rockspring. Limited copies are currently available by contacting Amy Skvarka at (717) 240-5360.

For more information about the efforts of this work group, contact Shelly Dehoff at (717) 880-0848.

Pa. 4-H Leaders Recognized

At the state level, her club members have placed first in public speaking, team demonstration, or individual demonstration for many years.

Several Penn State extension educators also participated in the symposium. Pat Comerford, Penn State Extension Horse Specialist and Nancy Kadwill, Montgomery County 4-H agent, represent Penn State on the AYHC board of directors and participated in several AYHC functions during the weekend.

Comerford and Donna Zang, Butler County Extension Director, presented a session on youth horse safety. Zang also conducted a seminar on using the Survivor Game theme for teaching horsemanship skills, and Nancy presented a program on Winter Horse Camps.

Brian Egan, Penn State Equine Extension Associate provided information in two sessions on equine behavior and horse handling and training.

The 2004 AYHC National Youth Horse Leaders Symposium will be held in Fort Worth, Texas.

A Healthy Horse Starts From The Ground Up

MICHELLE KUNJAPPU
Lancaster Farming Staff

ROCKSPRING (Centre Co.) — There is a lot riding on a horse's hooves.

Tom Siegenthaler, Centre Hall, a farrier, knows what a healthy, well-shod hoof should look like.

At Ag Progress Days in August, Siegenthaler demonstrated the process he goes through to shoe a horse.

To begin, he stands the horse on blacktop to see the balance of the horse's hoof, which has the responsibility of supporting equally the leg column and keeping the animal in balance.

In addition, Siegenthaler eyes the animal's hooves from behind, making sure the hooves are of equal height.

"My job as a horseshoer is to come in every four to six weeks and readjust a horse's balance," he said. He checks the shoes' wear to ascertain exactly how the horse should be shod.

Siegenthaler places a rasp down the middle of the horse's foot to check symmetry, his goal for the hoof.

With the rasp he removes the "flares," or extra hoof along the edges, then checks for a straight profile of the outer hoof wall by laying the rasp alongside the outside of the hoof.

"Ninety percent of horses are lame in the front end — keep horses on a regular shoeing basis," he said.

(Turn to Page E14)

Siegenthaler uses a hot shoeing technique, where he puts a heated shoe on the bottom of the hoof. The technique does not hurt the horse but seals the fibers of the foot and allows the farrier to see how the shoe fits.

From The Ground Up

"Very few horses have true, ideally-matched front feet," he said. "It's the job of the horseshoer to create consistency left to right and front to back.

"The idea is to trim and balance the horse's feet, then find a shoe of a suitable size and make it fit the horse," he said.

Shoes — Siegenthaler uses aluminum — both protect the hoof and offer traction.

Siegenthaler uses a hot shoeing technique, where he puts a heated shoe on the bottom of the hoof. The technique does not hurt the horse but seals the fibers of the foot and allows the farrier to see exactly how the shoe fits the horse.

He does the final fitting and nailing with a cold shoe.

"The margin for error is very slim," he said. "A sixteenth of an inch is the difference between a good nail and a bad nail," and could lame the horse.

When he shoes a horse, he keeps in mind that he has to allow room for the expansion and contraction that the hoof goes through when the horse is in motion.

In addition, he may leave a little extra shoe on the back of the hoof — "good heel coverage," according to Siegenthaler.

After nailing the shoe in place along the front edge of the hoof, Siegenthaler "clinches" the shoe by folding down the small piece of metal that has entered the bottom of the horse's hoof and protrudes a small amount from the wall.

One problem that he sees in the eastern U.S. is over hydration of the hoof, since horses may be let out at night. He believes in sealing up the hoof walls, especially after shoeing, to trap necessary moisture in and extra moisture out.

In the last steps of shoeing a horse, Siegenthaler measures the length of the horse's toes and heels with a calipers, since getting all four as close as possible to the same length is critical.

Farm Bureau Sets Equine Policy At Meeting

CAMP HILL (Cumberland Co.) — One of the major achievements of Pennsylvania Farm Bureau at the recent American Farm Bureau Federation Annual Meeting was to, for the first time, include the equine industry as part of Farm Bureau's efforts for agriculture.

Farm Bureau members from American Farm Bureau's 50 state Farm Bureaus and Puerto Rico, met Jan. 19-22 in Tampa, Florida, to set official public policy positions to guide the nationwide, general farm organization.

The 410-member American Farm Bureau Voting Delegate body approved policy which originated with Pennsylvania Farm Bureau to add "horse boarding, breeding and training (equine activities)" to American Farm Bureau policy supporting having a uniform definition of agriculture.

"This means that when the Farm Bureau stands up for agriculture, from now on it includes the equine industry," said Pennsylvania Farm Bureau President Guy Donaldson of Adams County who led the state farm organization's delegation to Florida. The policy was supported on the Voting Delegate floor by PFB's three-member voting delegation.

"This commodity group, as well as all other forms of animal breeding and production, is under attack from animal activists on both the state and federal levels. It desperately needs our fellow state farm bureau delegations to 'pull the wagons in a circle' giving unified American Farm Bureau support and protection to our nation's equine industry."

Results of a Penn State survey last fall on the economic impact of Pennsylvania's horse industry are not yet available. Pennsylvania's last study in 1990 showed the equine industry generated $4 billion in annual economic activity. According to the American Quarter Horse Association, Pennsylvania ranks fourth in the nation in the size of its horse population.

Donaldson added that horsemen and all their related businesses are critical to Pennsylvania's agricultural economy. Purchases of hay and farm-produced feed are obvious impacts. "We feel the equine industry needs to be included within the work of Farm Bureau," he said. "We're pleased that Voting Delegates from throughout the United States agreed and voted to accept our policy resolution."

Rutgers Announces Equine Science Center

NEW BRUNSWICK, N.J. — An Equine Science Center at Rutgers' Cook College, is the focus of an ongoing $19 million campaign.

The Center, which was approved by the Rutgers' board of governors in April 2001, expands upon the existing Cook College/NJAES equine science program.

The Equine Science Center will be housed on the Cook College Campus. A Long Distance Learning Center, the only one of its kind in the United States, will include a 500-seat closed circuit TV presentation area, with capability for live animal demonstrations. Several classrooms will be housed in the facility, as well as faculty offices, a library and a conference room.

The goal of the Equine Science Center is to further develop the equine program at Cook College, focusing on education, research, outreach, and the delivery of policy. The anticipated date of completion for the initiative is June 30, 2004. "The center will be a source of information for horse enthusiasts, students, equine industry professionals, legislators, policy makers, and the general public," says Dr. Karyn Malinowski, director of the center.

Research at the center will focus on the management of horse care and disease prevention. The center's scientists will develop diagnostic tools to detect animals at risk for disease injury.

They will also provide scientific expertise and consultation for issues related to drug use and performance, and investigate potential applications for the horse as a model for human medicine.

The center will serve policy makers by providing science-based information on how to enhance the economic viability and sustainability of the equine industry.

The center has strong support from New Jersey equine industry leaders, who emphasize the need for the center.

"We need the center to provide the solid, technical education and understanding that is so important to the horse industry: a basic science education that will teach students where things are going in the industry, and education that will help people get a good job and do a good job," says Jane Gilbert, president of the New Jersey Horse Council.

The 1996 New Jersey Equine Industry Economic Impact Survey reported the value of New Jersey horses and related assets to be over $3.2 billion. New Jersey is home to over 49,000 horses housed in 7,600 facilities on 81,000 acres.

"The equine industry contributes more to New Jersey's economy than any other agricultural enterprise," notes Dr. Malinowski. "Clearly, horses make a significant economic impact in New Jersey, and the Equine Science Center is positioned to become a leader in the equine industry."

900 Compete At State 4-H Horse Show

MICHELLE KUNJAPPU
Lancaster Farming Staff

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Almost all of Pennsylvania's 67 counties were represented at October's Pennsylvania State 4-H Show.

The show, conducted Oct. 25-27 at the Farm Show Complex, drew more than 1,000 horses and 900 young exhibitors.

The days of competition, which began at 8 a.m. and could run until 11 p.m., included hunt seat, saddle seat, working hunter, hunter under saddle, hunter hack, stock seat, and English and Western grooming and showmanship classes, besides Western pleasure and riding classes.

There were four driving divisions: miniature horse, pony, draft horse, and light horse. A therapeutic riding division was also included. In all, there was 42 performance and 67 production classes.

The competition also featured a production division, judged on the conformation of the animals. Other classes such as pole bending, keyhole, and barrel racing were a part of the show.

A Friday night dance and Saturday evening recognition ceremony provided evening entertainment. A model horse show was conducted Saturday morning.

Erin Niemczyk, Wellsboro, Endless Trails 4-H Club, Tioga County, readies Glowbar Fluci with the help of Hannah Driskell, Wellsboro.

At the show Lakiesha Wynn, 13, Acme, part of the Dawson Horse and Pony 4-H Club, planned to show her Haflinger gelding, Alexander, in several pony and driving classes.

Heather Will, Somerset County, was named the 2002 4-H Horse Program Outstanding Member and presented with a show saddle donated by the Pennsylvania 4-H Horse Program Development Committee.

She is a member of the Somerset County 4-H Country Clovers and is involved in numerous other 4-H activities. Heather is a freshman majoring in social work at Allegheny Community College.

Four finalists were given halters and leads. The finalists included Emily Fair, Bucks County; Katharine Griffith, York County; Stacie Katherman, Union County; and Elizabeth Radke, Butler County.

Shelby Kozar, Westmoreland County, was recognized as the first 4-H member in Pennsylvania to master Level Four Horsemanship Skills.

Thirty-three equine educational exhibits, on display during the event, were also judged. Westmoreland County won grand champion placing.

At the show Lakiesha Wynn, 13, Acme, part of the Dawson Horse and Pony 4-H club, planned to show her Haflinger gelding, Alexander, in several pony and driving classes. This is her second trip to the state 4-H horse show.

Lakeisha is from Bryle Haflinger Farm, her family's 20-acre horse farm that includes five of their own Haflingers and two boarders.

She has enjoyed the 4-H experience as an additional outlet to show her Haflinger animals, besides learning responsibility and better sportsmanship, she said. Lakeisha exhibited horses for five years prior to joining 4-H.

"The Dawson Horse and Pony 4-H Club includes riders from all over Fayette County. It is one of the oldest groups in the county. In fact, some of the kids' parents were in this club and now they (the children) are in the club," said Vicky Usher, co-leader of the organization.

The club includes 38 4-Hers, nine of which qualified to compete at state competition.

State 4-H Horse Show

lead the group, one of five 4-H horse and pony clubs in Fayette County.

According to Usher the 4-Hers put on horse shows to raise funds, and also have a November banquet.

Usher has been a leader since she graduated from 4-H, about five years ago, she said. "It's a really good bunch of kids. It's enough to keep me there for 25 years," she said.

"They show very good sportsmanship — they support each other wonderfully."

Erin Niemczyk, Wellsboro, has been in 4-H horse competition for seven years. She had been giving Hannah Driskell, Wellsboro, riding lessons when Hannah's horse was injure.

For the state competition, then, Erin turned the reins of her own horse over to Hannah to compete in several classes. Erin won the Western riding class in 1999 and 2000.

Hannah, with four years of 4-H experience, said that "4-H has been a lot of fun. We usually have really good judges at the shows," she said.

She has also learned how to work with others, besides learning the anatomy of a horse, and what equipment is proper to use on the animals.

"It's a good learning experience, even if you don't win anything," said Erin. "It's a good experience to make it to states, just to get that far, even if you don't place, since you're competing against other people who have made it to states.

"It's an honor to be here — it's a reward for all your hard work," she said.

Bethany Bickel, 19, Huntingdon, polished palomino Quarter Horse mare Moonlit Velvet in preparation for a grooming and showmanship class.

"Grooming is one of the hardest classes to get ready for here," she said. The horse's coat must be smooth and have no winter hair. The class also includes showmanship, so Bickel practiced up patterns and 360s, she said.

Bickel, part of the Hoof Printers 4-H club, with 30-40 participants, has been to states eight times and been in 4-H for 11 years.

"I'm happy to be here," said Bickel. "It's a reward at the end of the year for me, to know that I put in all this hard work and this is what I can get from it."

Bickel is an ag education major at Penn State.

Rebecca Bundy, Luthersburg, and pinto miniature horse Lady planned to compete in the yearling filly classes. Rebecca is a member of Town and County Horse and Pony Club, Clearfield County.

Make Increased Biosecurity A Priority

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.) — Because of the recent terrorist attacks and the outbreaks of human anthrax, our nation is on a heightened state of security against the threats of bioterrorism. As individuals involved in animal industries we must be vigilant to these threats against our animals, our food supply, and the health of our nation.

Horse owners should heighten their awareness of the importance of biosecurity. The possibility of a biological attack on our food supply needs to be considered and a defense must be prepared. Horse facilities are considered low risk for terrorism because horses are not used for food or fiber.

However, horses do provide an effective media to harbor or transport some foreign diseases. The ability to transfer disease increases the importance of monitoring the herd. Many veterinarians have been schooled in the knowledge of biological organisms and can play an important role in maintaining the safety of our country.

What you can do producers, stable owners and farmers should check their livestock regularly and immediately report signs of unusual disease to your veterinarian, or the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture. Also, producers are asked to report suspicious activities, intruders or circumstances to local police or sheriff's departments. License plate numbers and descriptions of trespassers should be recorded if possible.

•Central nervous system disorders.

When a suspicious case is reported, a trained foreign animal disease diagnostician (FADD) will be dispatched to the premises to assess the situation, inspect the animals, collect samples, post quarantines, if appropriate, and take additional steps to protect animal and human health.

Samples from suspect animals should NOT be submitted to the Pennsylvania Veterinary Laboratory or any other laboratory. Samples should only be submitted by FADD to Plum Island or NVSL.

Suspicious cases can be reported to PDA at (717) 772-2852 from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. and after normal working hours at (717) 772-2852, or any other main office phone number.

After hour calls will be forwarded to a voice mailbox, and instructions will be given for leaving an emergency message that will cause the veterinarian on call to be paged. The USDA also has a 24 hour phone number: (800) 601-9327. Daytime calls can be made to the USDA Harrisburg office at (717) 782-3442.

Anyone reporting a case should be prepared to provide a description of the signs of disease, the species and number of animals involved, and the location of the animals.

LEESBURG, Va. — Every year thousands of spectators are drawn to watch race after race of Thoroughbreds battling to be the first to the finish.

At steeplechase contests, crowds gather to watch the tumult of horses flying full-tilt over jumps.

In fact, according to an insert provided by Morven Park races, millions of fans watched steeplechase races last year at 35 courses in 12 states. Horses won approximately $4 million in purse money in those contests.

On October 12, 2002, Loudoun County's Morven Park hosted the 23rd annual races, a series of hurdle, flat, and timber races.

The event included national fences, a man-made fence used in major track steeplechase races.

MAYO MATS
FOR HORSE STALLS
From Ireland's premier manufacturer of horse mats.
Mayo Mats have been the choice of leading breeders in Ireland and Britain for over 12 years and are now available in the United States.
Mayo Mats are designed to provide a surface which can completely absorb the impact of a horse's hoof while they move about the stall. The mat provides a dynamic much closer to pasture. Horses are in better condition and better rested when they leave the stall.
The Mat also provides an unparalleled comfort while the horse is laying down. This is due to the fact that the mat softens under the body heat of the horse and for this reason eliminates the need for bedding for comfort.
Better horse comfort, lower bedding costs, exclusively from Mayo Mats.

Timber fences are natural wooden fences made of boards.

During the day, purses ranged from $3,000 to $12,500, with the first-place winner taking home approximately 60 percent. Traditionally, shares of the rest of the purse are paid to second through sixth place.

Lengths of the races varied from a 6.5 furlong sprint over turf (a furlong is an eighth of a mile or 220 yards) to a 3.25 mile race over timber.

Besides tents with catered lunches, tailgating was on the menu for many families who lined the fence to watch the races.

The tents, perched atop a rise which overlooked the course, offered a chance for spectators to watch the races unfold below.

The horses begin training months in advance. They start with a workout of about a mile and a quarter at a gallop every day — an exercise pattern that gets progressively faster as race day approaches.

Before the race, the required vet check ensures that all the horses are examined for abnormalities in the legs, which may include thickening or swelling.

Veterinarians will also check the animal's tattoo and teeth to make sure the animal is the age that it is listed for the race.

The vets will also watch the horse trot to catch any lameness problems.

The check prevents injuries by perhaps catching what trainers have missed, such as a problem that may have happened in transport, according to Dr. Harold McKenzie, Marion DuPont Scott Equine Medical Center.

Not only horses but also jockeys are a major part of the excitement of the races.

A half-hour break between races gives jockeys a chance to change their silks, since many jockeys ride in several races during the day.

Jockeys can weigh in a at higher weights (approximately 140-150 pounds each) for steeplechase races than flat, track races (around 110-115 pounds). Many of the jockeys school the horses they ride over jumps.

One such jockey is George

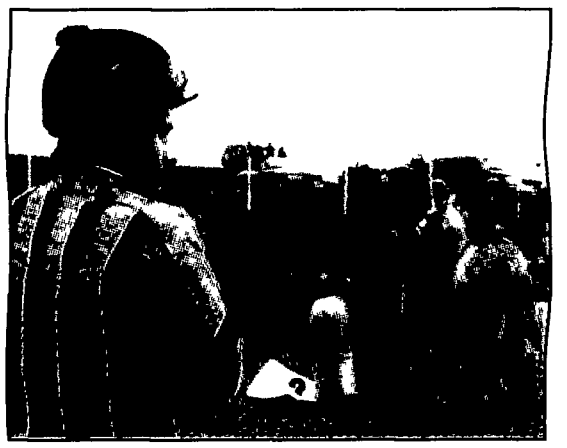
A steward watches over race preparations.



George Wood, North Carolina, surveys the paddock as he prepares to mount for his first race of the day. A half hour between races allows the jockeys, who may ride in several races throughout the day, to change their silks. Protective padding is worn under their silks.

In addition, he competes in saddle bronc and bareback riding at rodeos throughout the South. Although this varied riding experience is exciting, the lifestyle also has its risks — Wood has broken his collarbone, wrist, and ribs over the years.
